

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

THE Birds of Aristophanes has always been regarded as one of his most delightful pieces. Like the Clouds, it is comparatively free from the objectionable license of thought and language, which deforms several of his plays to such a degree that they cannot be used in schools or colleges. It is true there are some passages in this play also too freely executed: but it has been decided, on mature reflection, to let them stand, so as to offer the drama entire, on the principles which guided my decision in editing the Clouds.

The text of this edition is reprinted from the Poetae Scenici of Dindorf. In the preparation of the notes, I have used Commentaries of Christian Daniel Beck, together with the notes and Scholia edited by Invernizius; the notes of Bothe, to whose valuable edition I am under great obligations; and the brief, but excellent, annotations of Blaydes. Credit is always given for what has been taken from the labors of these distinguished scholars.

In addition to the critical apparatus just mentioned, I have endeavored to explain from other sources a branch of the subject to which less attention has heretofore been given; — I mean the natural history of the birds, which are very entertaining figures among the persons of the play. I have carefully examined Aristotle's History of Animals, from which I have drawn illustrative descriptions. But it is well known that a considerable portion of the birds of Aristophanes are not mentioned in Aristotle's work, and some of them are thought to be unknown. Several branches of the natural history of Greece has been almost entirely neglected since the researches of the philosopher of Stagira; and here is an opportunity for a naturalist, who is at the same time a good classical scholar, to make valuable contributions both to science and philology. Sibthorp's magnificent work, the "Flora Hellenica," is ample on the Botany of Greece; but comparatively little has been done in the departments of ornithology and ichthyology.

I suspected that the poet's selection of birds was not made at random, but that, in every instance, they were chosen with a special meaning, and to effect a particular purpose, in point of art. In considering the play from this point of view, I have been much indebted to my friend and colleague, Professor Agassiz, of whose profound and comprehensive knowledge of ornithology I have been permitted to avail myself in attempting to determine the species of some of the birds not hitherto identified; and I have come to the conclusion, that, in all cases, the character and habits of the birds are exactly and curiously adapted to the parts they perform in the comedy, showing Aristophanes to have been a careful observer of nature, as well as a consummate poet. I have also used with profit a little work, entitled "Beitraege zur Ornithologie Griechenlands, von Heinrich Graf von der Mühle," or, Contributions to the Ornithology of Greece, by Henry Count von der Mühle; a work of interest and importance, though written without any reference to the classical bearings of the subject.

Great care has been taken to illustrate the political allusions, and the application of judicial expressions, in the course of the piece. For this purpose the excellent writings of Hermann, Smith, and Boeckh have been freely cited. St.

John's admirable work on the Manners and Customs of the Hellenes has also been consulted.

It is probably impossible, at present, to feel the full force of the wit and gayety of Aristophanes, much of which turned upon temporary and local relations. Still, a careful study of contemporary history, political and judicial institutions, popular prejudices and delusions, and the influence of oracles and other means of working upon ignorant or even cultivated credulity, will make all the material points of the comedy of Aristophanes sufficiently clear.

The satire of the Birds is more playful, comprehensive, and genial than that of any other of the poet's comedies. The spirit of parody and burlesque, which is a general trait of the Aristophanic drama, here displays itself most freely and amusingly. Even the solemn genius of Pindar does not escape entirely the poet's whimsical perversions. The dithyrambic poets in general are unsparingly ridiculed; the philosophers and men of science are not allowed to pass untouched; while profligates and impostors of every class and description are here, as well as in the Clouds, held up to scorn and contempt.

Much discussion has been held upon the question as to the specific object the poet aimed at in his plan. Some have endeavored to show that the main drift of the piece is to expose the folly of the Athenians in their dreams of universal empire, at the time of the Sicilian Expedition; and these critics have fancied they could identify, not only the political parties in the Peloponnesian War, but individual characters in the history of the times. This is pressing matters of fact too far in judging of a poetical work. No doubt Aristophanes sought to lay the foundation of all his pieces in the actual life, public and private, of his age. But his genius could not so completely bind itself to the prosaic realities around him. His Pegasus trod the firm earth, but never bowed his neck to the yoke. Some of the leading ideas were unquestionably suggested by the popular madness which the versatile and profligate genius of Alcibiades had done so much to kindle among the Athenians of his time; but the groundwork only of the play was laid in political passions and historical events. That established, the poet gave free scope to his brilliant fancy, boundless wit, and unsurpassed powers of invention, and produced a poem, not only fitted to amuse and delight his countrymen, but to interest the lovers of literature in future ages, by the richest union of sportive satire and creative imagination that the comic theatre of Athens ever witnessed.

The following Argument is somewhat condensed from the works of the poet Gray. It is prefixed to the spirited translation of the Rev. Henry Francis Cary.

This new edition has been carefully revised, not only by myself, but by my friend Professor Goodwin, who has added valuable notes and illustrations. His excellent work on the Greek Moods and Tenses has been constantly used, as the student will find by numerous references, indicated by the letter G., scattered through the commentary.

CAMBRIDGE, March 1, 1861.

IN preparing the third edition for the press, many corrections have been made in the Greek text, chiefly of typographical errors in accents and punctuation. Besides a great number of similar changes in the notes, corrections more or less affecting the sense (and in some cases additions) have been made in the notes on the following verses: 63, 133, 448-450, 453, 476, 489, 507, 694, 760-761, 853-860, 1107, 1210, 1215-1216, 1228-1229, 1605, 1620, 1721.

ARGUMENT.*

"EUELPIDES and Pisthetaerus, two ancient Athenians, thoroughly weary of the folly, injustice, and litigious temper of their countrymen, determine to leave Attica for good and all; and having heard much of the fame of Epops, king of the birds, who was once a man under the name of Tereus, and had married an Athenian lady, they pack up a few necessary utensils, and set out for the court of that prince, under the conduct of a jay and a raven, birds of great distinction in augury, without whose direction the Greeks never undertook anything of consequence. Their errand is to inquire of the birds, who are the greatest travellers of any nation, where they may meet with a quiet, easy settlement, far from all prosecutions, lawsuits, and sycophant informers, to pass the remainder of their lives in peace and liberty.

"The scene is a wild, unfrequented country, which terminates in mountains; there the old men are seen, (accompanied by two slaves, who carry their little baggage,) fatigued and fretting at the carelessness of their guides, who, though they cost them a matter of a groat in the market, are good for nothing but to bite them by the fingers and lead them out of the way. They travel on, however, till they come to the foot of the rocks, which stop up their passage, and put them to their wits' end. Here the raven croaks, and the jay chatters and looks up into the air, as much as to say that this is the place: upon which they knock with a stone and with their heels (as though it were against a door) against the side of the mountain.

"Trochilus, a bird that waits upon Epops, appears above; he is frightened at the sight of two men, and they are much more so at the length of his beak and the fierceness of his aspect. He takes them for fowlers; and they insist upon it, that they are not men, but birds. In their confusion, their guides, whom they held in a string, escape and fly away. Epops, during this, is asleep within, after having dined upon a dish of beetles and berries: their noise awakens him, and he comes out of the grove.

"At the strangeness of his figure, they are divided between fear and laughing. They tell him their errand, and he gives them the choice of several cities fit for their purpose, one particularly on the coast of the Red Sea, all which they refuse, for many comical reasons. He tells them the happiness of living among the birds; they are much pleased with the liberty and simplicity of it; and Pisthetaerus, a shrewd old fellow, proposes a scheme to improve it, and make them a far more powerful and considerable nation. Epops is struck with the project, and calls up his consort, the nightingale, to summon all his people together with her voice. They sing a fine ode.

"The birds come flying down, at first one by one, and perch here and there about the scene; and at last the Chorus, in a whole body, come hopping and fluttering and twittering in. At the sight of the two men they are in great tumult, and think that their king has betrayed them to the enemy. They determine to tear the two old men to pieces, draw themselves up in battle array, and are giving the word to fall on. Euelpides and Pisthetaerus, in all the terrors of death, after upbraiding each the other for bringing him into such distress, and trying in vain to escape, assume courage from mere despair, seize upon the kitchen furniture which they had brought with them, and, armed with pipkins for helmets, and with spits for lances, they present a resolute front to the enemy's phalanx. On the point of battle, Epops interposes, pleads hard for his two guests, who are, he says, his wife's relations, and people of wonderful abilities, and well affected to their commonwealth. His eloquence has its effect: the birds grow less violent, they enter into a truce with the old men, and both sides lay down their arms. Pisthetaerus, upon the authority of Aesop's fables, proves to them the great antiquity of their nation; that they were born before the creation of the earth, and before the gods, and once reigned over all countries, as he shows from several testimonies and monuments of different nations; that the cock wears his tiara erect, like the Persian king, and that all mankind start out of their beds at his command; that when the kite makes his first appearance in the spring, every one prostrates himself on the ground before it; that the Egyptians and Phoenicians set about their harvest as soon as the cuckoo is heard; that all kings bear an eagle on their sceptre, and many of the gods carry a bird on their head; that many great men swear by the goose, &c., &c. When he has revived in them the memory of their ancient empire, he laments their present despicable condition, and the affronts put upon them by mankind. They are convinced of what he says, applaud his oration, and desire his advice. He proposes that they shall unite, and build a city in the mid-air, whereby all commerce will effectually be stopped between heaven and earth : the gods will no longer be able to visit at ease their Semeles and Alcmenas below, nor feast on the fume of sacrifices daily sent up to them, nor men enjoy the benefit of the seasons, nor the fruits of the earth, without permission from those winged deities of the middle region. He shows how mankind will lose nothing by this change of government ; that the birds may be worshipped at a far less expense, nothing more than a few berries or a handful of corn ; that they will need no sumptuous temples ; that, by their great knowledge of futurity, they will direct their good votaries in all their expeditions, so as they can never fail of success ; that the ravens, famed for the length of their lives, may make a present of a century or two to their worshippers ; and, besides, the birds will ever be within call, when invoked, and not sit pouting in the clouds, and keeping their state so many miles off. The scheme is highly admired, and the two old men are to be made free of the city, and each of them is to be adorned with a pair of wings at the public charge. Epops invites them to his nest-royal, and entertains them nobly. The nightingale in the mean time joins the Chorus without, and the parabasis begins.

“ They sing their own nobility and ancient grandeur, their prophetic skill, the benefits they do mankind already, and all the good which they design them ; they descant upon the power of music, in which they are such great masters, and intermix many strokes of satire ; they show the advantages of flying, and apply it to several whimsical cases ; and they invite all such as would be free from the heavy tyranny of human laws to live among them, where it is no sin to beat one’s father, &c., &c.

“ The old men, now become birds, and magnificently fledged, after laughing awhile at the new and awkward figure they make, consult about the name which they shall give to their rising city, and fix upon that of Nephelococcygia, or Cuckoocloudland; and while one goes to superintend the workmen, the other prepares to sacrifice for the prosperity of the city, which is growing apace.

"They begin a solemn prayer to all the birds of Olympus, putting the swan in the place of Apollo, the cock in that of Mars, and the ostrich in that of the great mother Cybele, &c.

"A miserable poet having already heard of the new settlement, comes with some lyric poetry, which he has composed on this great occasion. Pisthetaerus knows his errand from his looks, and makes them give him an old coat; but, not contented with that, he begs to have the waistcoat to it, in the elevated style of Pindar: they comply, and get rid of him.

"The sacrifice is again interrupted by a begging prophet, who brings a cargo of oracles, partly relating to the prosperity of the city of Nephelococcygia, and partly to a new pair of shoes, of which he is in extreme want. Pisthetaerus loses patience, and cuffs him and his religious trumpery off the stage.

"Meto, the famous geometrician, comes next, and offers a plan which he has drawn for the new buildings, with much importance and impertinence: he meets with as bad a reception as the prophet.

"An ambassador, or licensed spy, from Athens arrives, and a legislator, with a body of new laws. They are used with abundance of indignity, and go off, threatening everybody with a prosecution. The sacred rites being so often interrupted, they are forced to remove their altar, and finish them behind the scenes.

"The Chorus rejoice in their own increasing power; and (as about the time of the Dionysia it was usual to make proclamation against the enemies of the republic) they set a price upon the head of a famous poulterer, who has exercised infinite cruelties upon their friends and brethren; then they turn themselves to the judges and spectators, and promise, if this drama obtain the victory, how propitious they will be to them.

"Pisthetaerus returns, and reports, that the sacrifice appears auspicious to their undertaking: a messenger then enters, with an account how quick the works advance, and whimsically describes the employments allotted to the several birds, in different parts of the building.

"Another messenger arrives in a violent hurry, to tell how somebody from heaven has deceived the vigilance of the jackdaws, who were upon guard, and passed through the gates down into the lower air; but that a whole squadron of light-winged forces were in pursuit of this insolent person, and hoped to fetch him back again. The birds are in great perturbation, and all in a flutter about it.

"This proves to be Iris, who in her return is stopped short, and seized by order of Pisthetaerus. He examines her, Where is her passport? Whether she had leave from the watch? What is her business? Who is she? — in short, he treats her with great authority. She tells her name, and that she was sent by Jove with orders to mankind, that they should keep holiday, and perform a grand sacrifice; she wonders at their sauciness and madness, and threatens them with all her father's thunder. The governor of Nephelococcygia returns it with higher menaces, and with language very indecent indeed for a goddess and a maid to hear.

"The herald, who had been despatched to the lower world, returns with an account that all Athens was gone bird-mad; that it was grown a fashion to imitate them in their names and manners; and that shortly they might expect to see a whole convoy arrive, in order to settle among them. The Chorus run to fetch a vast cargo of feathers and wings to equip their new citizens, when they come.

"The first who appears is a profligate young fellow, who hopes to enjoy a liberty which he could not enjoy so well at home, the liberty of beating his father. Pisthetaerus allows it, indeed, to be the custom of his people; but at the same time informs him of an ancient law preserved among the storks, that they shall maintain their parents in their old age. This is not at all agreeable to the youth: however, in consideration of his affection for the Nephelococcygians, Pisthetaerus furnishes him with a feather for his helmet, and a cock's spur for a weapon, and advises him, as he seems to be of a military turn, to go into the army in Thrace.

"The next is Cinesias, the dithyrambic writer, who is delighted with the thought of living among the clouds, amidst those airy regions whence all his poetical flights are derived; but Pisthetaerus will have no such animal among his birds; he drives him back to Athens with great contempt.

"He then drives away also (but not without a severe whipping) an informer, who for the better despatch of business comes to beg a pair of wings to carry him round the islands and cities subject to Athens, whose inhabitants he is used to swear against for an honest livelihood, as did, he says, his fathers before him. The birds, in the ensuing chorus, relate their travels, and describe the strange things and strange men they have seen in them.

"A person in disguise, with all the appearance of caution and fear, comes to inquire for Pisthetaerus, to whom he discovers himself to be Prometheus, and tells him (but first he makes them hold a large umbrella over his head for fear Jupiter should spy him) that the gods are all in a starving, miserable condition; and, what is worse, that barbarian gods (who live no one knows where, in a part of heaven far beyond the gods of Greece) threaten to make war upon them, unless they will open the ports, and renew the intercourse between mankind and them, as of old. He advises Pisthetaerus to make the most of this intelligence, and to reject all offers boldly which Jupiter may make him, unless he will consent to restore to the birds their ancient power, and give him in marriage his favorite attendant, Basilea. This said, he slips back again to heaven, as he came. The Chorus continue an account of their travels.

"An embassy arrives from heaven, consisting of Hercules, Neptune, and a certain Triballian god. As they approach the city walls, Neptune is dressing and scolding at the outlandish divinity, and teaching him how to carry himself a little decently. They find Pisthetaerus busy in giving orders about a dish of wild fowl, (i. e. of birds which had been guilty of high misdemeanors, and condemned to die by the public,) which are dressing for his dinner. Hercules, who before was for bringing off the head of this audacious mortal without further conference, finds himself insensibly relent, as he snuffs the savory steam. He salutes Pisthetaerus, who receives them very coldly, and is more attentive to his kitchen than to their compliment. Neptune opens his commission; owns that his nation (the gods) are not the better for this war, and on reasonable terms would be glad of a peace. Pisthetaerus, according to the advice of Prometheus, proposes (as if to try them) the first condition, namely, that of Jupiter's restoring to the birds their ancient power; and, if this should be agreed to, he says that he hopes to entertain my lords the ambassadors at dinner. Hevcles, pleased with this last compliment, so agreeable to his appetite, comes readily into all he asks; but is severely reprov'd by Neptune for his gluttony. Pisthetaerus argues the point, and shows how much it would be for the mutual interest of both nations; and Neptune is hungry enough to be glad of some reasonable pretence to give the thing up. The Triballian god is asked his opinion for form: he mutters somewhat, which nobody understands, and so it passes for his consent. Here they are going in to dinner, and all is well; when Pisthetaerus bethinks himself of the match with Basilea. This makes Neptune fly out again: he will not hear of it; he will return home instantly; but Hercules cannot think of leaving a good meal so; he is ready to acquiesce in any conditions. His colleague attempts to show him that he is giving up his patrimony for a dinner; and what will become of him after Jupiter's death, if the birds are to have everything during his lifetime. Pisthetaerus clearly proves to Hercules that this is a mere imposition; that by the laws of Solon a bastard has no inheritance; that if Jove died without legitimate issue, his brothers would succeed to his estate, and that he speaks only out of interest. Now the Triballian god is again to determine the matter; they interpret his jargon as favorable to them; so Neptune is forced to give up the point, and Pisthetaerus goes with him and the barbarian to heaven to fetch his bride, while Hercules stays behind to take care that the roast meat is not spoiled.

"A messenger returns with the news of the approach of Pisthetaerus and his bride; and accordingly they appear in the air in a splendid machine, he with Jove's thunderbolt in his hand, and by his side Basilea, magnificently adorned: the birds break out in loud songs of exultation, and conclude the drama with their hymeneal."

The play was performed in the Archonship of Chabrias, B. C. 414. Ameipsias was first, with the Revellers; Aristophanes second, with the Birds; Phrynichus third, with the Monotropos, or Recluse. (See the first ὑπόθεσις, page 3.)

^{gave} Δετὸν ὄρνιν ἐσθηκεν ἔχων ἐπὶ τῆς κεφαλῆς, βασιλεὺς ᾧν· ⁵¹⁵

Ἡ δ' αὖ θυγάτηρ γλαυχ', ὁ δ' Ἀπολλων ὥσπερ θεράπων ἱέρακα.

ΕΥΕΛΠΙΔΗΣ.

Νῆ τὴν Δήμητρ' εὖ ταῦτα λέγεις. Τίνος οὖνεκα ταῦτ' ἄρ' ἔχουσιν;

ΠΕΙΣΘΕΤΑΙΡΟΣ.

Ἴν' ὅταν θύων τις ἔπειτ' αὐτοῖς εἰς τὴν χεῖρ', ὡς νόμος ἐστί,

Τὰ σπλιάγχνα διδῶ, τοῦ Διὸς αὐτοὶ πρότεροι τὰ σπλιάγχνα λάβωσιν.

Ὡμνυ τ' οὐδεὶς τότ' ἂν ἀνθρώπων θεόν, ἀλλ' ὀρνιθας ἅπαντες. 520

Λάμπων δ' ὅμνυσ' ἔτι καὶ νυνὶ τὸν χῆν, ὅταν ἐξα-πατᾷ τι.

Οὕτως ὑμᾶς πάντες πρότερον μεγάλους ἀγίους τ' ἐνόμιζον,

Νῦν δ' ἀνδράποδ', ἡλιθίους, Μανᾶς.

Ὡσπερ δ' ἤδη τοὺς μαινομένους

Βάλλουσ' ὑμᾶς, κὰν τοῖς ἱεροῖς 525

Πᾶς τις ἐφ' ὑμῖν ὀρνιθευτῆς

Ἰστησι βρόχους, παγίδας, ράβδους,

Ἐρκη, νεφέλας, οἰκτυὰ, πηκτάς.

Εἵτα λαβόντες πωλοῦσ' ἀθροῦς.

Οἱ δ' ὠνούνται βλιμάζοντες 530

Κοῦδ' οὖν, εἴπερ ταῦτα δοκεῖ δρᾶν,

Ὅπτησάμενοι παρέθενθ' ὑμᾶς,

Ἄλλ' ἐπικνῶσιν τυρόν, ἔλαιον;

Σίλφιον, ὄξος, καὶ τρίψαντες.

Κατάχυσμ' ἕτερον γλυκὺ καὶ λιπαρόν,

535

Κάπειτα κατεσκέδασαν θερμόν.

Τοῦτο καθ' ὑμῶν

Αὐτῶν ὥσπερ κενεβρείων.

ΧΟΡΟΣ.

Ἀντιστροφή.

Πολὺ δὴ πολὺ δὴ χαλεπωτάτους λόγους

Ἦνεγκας, ἄνθρωπ' ὥς ἐδάκρυσά γ' ἐμῶν

540

Πατέρων κάκην, οἱ

Τάσδε τὰς τιμὰς προγόνων παραδόντων,

Ἐπ' ἐμοῦ κατέλυσαν.

Σὺ δέ μοι κατὰ δαίμονα καὶ κατὰ συντυχίαν

Ἀγαθὴν ἤκεις ἐμοὶ σωτήρ.

545

Ἀναθεὶς γὰρ ἐγὼ σοι

Τά τε νοττία κάμαντόν οἰκήσω.

Ἄλλ' ὅ τι χρὴ δρᾶν, σὺ δίδασκε παρών· ὥς ζῆν οὐκ ἄξιον ἡμῖν,

Εἰ μὴ κομιούμεθα παντὶ τρόπῳ τὴν ἡμετέραν βασιλείαν.

ΠΕΙΣΘΕΤΑΙΡΟΣ.

Καὶ δὴ τοίνυν πρῶτα διδάσκω μίαν ὀρνίθων πόλιν

εἶναι,

550

Κάπειτα τὸν αἶρα πάντα κύκλῳ καὶ πᾶν τουτὶ τὸ μεταξὺ

Περιτειχίζειν μεγάλας πλίνθοις ὅπταις ὥσπερ Βαβυλῶνα.

ΕΠΟΥ.

ὦ Κεβριόνᾶ καὶ Πορφυρίων, ὡς σμερδαλέον τὸ πόλισμα!

ΠΕΙΣΘΕΤΑΙΡΟΣ.

Κᾶπειτ' ἦν τοῦτ' ἐπανέστηκα, τὴν ἀρχὴν τὸν Δί' ἀπαι-τεῖν.

Κὰν μὲν μὴ φῇ μηδ' ἐβλήσῃ μηδ' εὐθὺς γνωσιμα-χῆσῃ, ἀκωνίλει 555

Ἰερὸν πόλεμον πρωυδᾶν αὐτῷ, καὶ τοῖσι θεοῖσιν ἀπει-πεῖν

Διὰ τῆς χώρας τῆς ὑμετέρας ἐστυκόσιν μὴ διαφοιτᾶν,

Ὡσπερ πρότερον μοιχεύοντες τὰς Ἀλκμήνας κατέ-βαινον

Καὶ τὰς Ἀλόπας καὶ τὰς Σεμέλας· ἦνπερ δ' ἐπίωσ', ἐπιβάλλειν

Σφραγίδ' αὐτοῖς ἐπὶ τὴν ψῶλην, ἵνα μὴ βινῶσ' ἔτ' ἐκείνας. 560

Τοῖς δ' ἀνθρώποις ὄρνιν ἕτερον πέμψαι κήρυκα κελεύω,

Ὡς ὀρνίθων βασιλευόντων, θύειν ὄρνισι τὸ λοιπόν.

Κᾶπειτα θεοῖς ὕστερον αὖθις· προσνεύμασθαι δὲ πρεπόντως

Τοῖσι θεοῖσιν τῶν ὀρνίθων ὃς ἂν ἀρμόζῃ καθ' ἕκαστον.

Ἦν Ἀφροδίτῃ θύῃ, πυροὺς ὀρνιθὶ φαλλήριδι θύειν. 565

Ἦν δὲ Ποσειδῶνι τις οἶν θύῃ, νήττη πυροὺς καθαγίζειν.

Ἦν δ' Ἑρακλέει θύῃ τις βοῦν, λάρῳ ναστοὺς μελι

{τούττας·}

Κὰν Διὶ θύῃ βασιλεῖ κριόν, βασιλεύς ἐστ' ὀρχίλος ὄρνις,

ΕΥΕΛΠΙΔΗΣ.

Οὐκ ἐθελήσει μὰ Δί', ἀλλ' ὄφει προφάσεις αὐτὴν πα-ρέχουσιν.

ΠΕΙΣΘΕΤΑΙΡΟΣ.

Οἱ δ' αὖ κόρακες τῶν ζευγαρίων, οἷσιν τὴν γῆν καταροῦσιν,

Καὶ τῶν προβάτων τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς ἐκκοφάντων ἐπὶ πειρά·

Εἴθ' ὃ γ' Ἀπόλλων ἱατρός γ' ὦν ἰάσθω· μισθοφορεῖ δέ.

ΕΥΕΛΠΙΔΗΣ.

Μή, πρὶν γ' ἂν ἐγὼ τὸ βοιδαρίω τῶμόν πρότις ἀπο-δώμαι.

ΠΕΙΣΘΕΤΑΙΡΟΣ.

Ἦν δ' ἡγῶνται σὲ θεόν, σὲ βίον, σὲ δὲ Γῆν, σὲ Κρόνον, σὲ Ποσειδῶ,

Ἀγάθ' αὐτοῖσιν πάντα παρέσται.

ΕΠΟΨ.

Λέγε δή μοι τῶν ἀγαθῶν ἓν.

ΠΕΙΣΘΕΤΑΙΡΟΣ.

Πρῶτα μὲν αὐτῶν τὰς οἰνανθας οἱ πάρνοπες οὐ κατέ-δονται,

Ἀλλὰ γλαυκῶν λόχος εἰς αὐτοὺς καὶ κερχινήδων ἐπιτρίφει.

Εἴθ' οἱ κῦπες καὶ ψῆγες αἰὲ τὰς συκάς οὐ κατέδουται,

Ἀλλ' ἀναλέξει πάντας καθαρῶς αὐτοὺς ἀγέλη μία κιχλῶν.

ΕΠΟΨ.

Πλουτεῖν δὲ πόθεν δώσομεν αὐτοῖς ; καὶ γὰρ τούτου σφόδρ' ἐρώσι.

ΠΕΙΣΘΕΤΑΙΡΟΣ.

Τὰ ^{μετάλλ'} μέταλλ' αὐτοῖς μαντενομένοις οὔτοι δώσουσι τὰ χρηστὰ
Τάς τ' ἐμπορίας τὰς κερδαλέας πρὸς τὸν μάντιν κατεροῦσιν,
Ὡστ' ἀπολείται τῶν ναυκληρῶν οὐδεῖς.

ΕΠΟΨ.

Πῶς οὐκ ἀπολείται ; 595

ΠΕΙΣΘΕΤΑΙΡΟΣ.

Προερεῖ τις αἰὲ τῶν ὀρνίθων μαντενομένῳ περὶ τοῦ πλοῦ
Νυνὶ μὴ πλεί, χειμῶν ἔσται · νυνὶ πλεί, κέρδος ἐπέσται.

ΕΥΕΛΠΙΔΗΣ.

Γαῦλον κτῶμαι καὶ ναυκληρῶ, κοῦκ ἂν μείναιμι παρ' ὑμῖν.

ΠΕΙΣΘΕΤΑΙΡΟΣ.

Τοὺς θησαυρούς τ' αὐτοῖς δείξουσ' οὓς οἱ πρότερον κα-τέθεντο
Τῶν ἀργυρίων · οὔτοι γὰρ ἴσασι · λέγουσι δέ τοι τάδε πάντες, 600
Οὐδεῖς οἶδεν τὸν θησαυρὸν τὸν ἐμὸν πλὴν εἴ τις ἄρ' ὄρνις.

ΕΥΕΛΠΙΔΗΣ.

Πωλῶ γαῦλον, κτῶμαι σμινύην, καὶ τὰς ὑδρίας ἀνορύττω.

ΕΠΟΨ.

Πῶς δ' ὑγίειαν δώσουσ' αὐτοῖς, οὔσαν παρα τοῖσι θεοῖσιν ;

ΠΕΙΣΘΕΤΑΙΡΟΣ.

Ἦν εὖ πράττωσ', οὐχ ὑγεία μεγάλη τοῦτ' ἐστί ; σάφ' ἴσθι,

Ὡς ἄνθρωπός γε κακῶς πράττων ἀτεχνῶς οὐδεὶς ὑγιαί-νει. 605

ΕΠΟΨ.

Πῶς δ' εἰς γῆράς ποτ' ἀφίξονται ; Καὶ γὰρ τοῦτ' ἔστ' ἐν Ὀλύμπῳ .

Ἦ παιδάρ' ὄντ' ἀποθνήσκειν δεῖ ;

ΠΕΙΣΘΕΤΑΙΡΟΣ.

Μὰ Δί', ἀλλὰ τριάκόσι' αὐτοῖς ἔτι προσθήσουσ' ὄρνιθες ἔτη.

ΕΠΟΨ.

Παρά τοῦ ;

ΠΕΙΣΘΕΤΑΙΡΟΣ.

Παρά τοῦ ; Παρ' ἐαυτῶν.
Οὐκ οἶσθ' ὅτι πέντ' ἀνδρῶν γενεὰς ζῶει ^{Μινυμ ἀνδρῶν} λακέρυζα κο-ρώνη ;

ΕΥΕΛΠΙΔΗΣ.

Αἰβοί, ὥς πολλῶ κρείττους οὔτοι τοῦ Διὸς ἡμῖν βασιλεύειν. 610

ΠΕΙΣΘΕΤΑΙΡΟΣ.

Οὐ γὰρ πολλῶ ;

Καὶ πρῶτα μὲν οὐχὶ νεὼς ἡμᾶς

Οἰκοδομεῖν δέῃ λιθίνους αὐτοῖς,
 Οὐδὲ θυρώσαι χρυσαῖσι θύραις,
 Ἄλλ' ὑπὸ θάμνοις καὶ πρινιδίοις 615
 Οἰκήσουσιν. Τοῖς δ' αὖ σεμνοῖς
 Τῶν ὀρνίθων δένδρον ἐλάας
 Ὅ νεὸς ἔσται· κούκ εἰς Δελφούς
 Οὐδ' εἰς Ἀμμων' ἐλθόντες ἐκεῖ
 Θύσομεν, ἀλλ' ἐν ταῖσιν κομάραις 620
 Καὶ τοῖς κοτίνοις στάντες ἔχοντες
 Κριθάς, πυρούς, εὐξόμεθ' αὐτοῖς
 Ἀνατείνοντες τὸ χεῖρ' ἀγαθῶν
 Διδόναι τι μέρος· καὶ ταῦθ' ἡμῖν
 Παραχρῆμ' ἔσται 625
 Πυρούς ὀλίγους προβαλοῦσιν.

ΧΟΡΟΣ.

ὦ φίλτατ' ἐμοὶ πολὺν πρεσβυτῶν ἐξ ἐχθίστου μετα-πίπτων,
 Οὐκ ἔστιν ὅπως ἂν ἐγὼ ποθ' ἐκὼν τῆς σῆς γνώμης ἔτ' ἀφείμην.
 Ἐπαυχήσας δὲ τοῖσι σοῖς λόγοις
 Ἐπηπείλησα καὶ κατώμοσα, 630
 Ἦν σὺ παρ' ἐμὲ θέμενος
 Ὁμόφρονας λόγους δικαίους,
 Ἀδόλους, ὁσίους,
 Ἐπὶ θεοὺς ἵης,
 Ἐμοὶ φρονῶν ξυνωδά, μὴ
 Πολὺν χρόνον θεοὺς ἔτι 635

Σκῆπτρα τὰμὰ τρίψειν.

Ἄλλ' ὅσα μὲν δεῖ ῥώμῃ πράττειν, ἐπὶ ταῦτα τεταξόμεθ' ἡμεῖς·

✓ Ὅσα δὲ γνώμῃ δεῖ βουλευεῖν, ἐπὶ σοὶ τάδε πάντ' ἀνάκειται.

ΕΠΟΨ.

Καὶ μὴν μὰ τὸν Δί' οὐχὶ νυστάζειν γ' ἔτι 640

ὦρα ὅστιν ἡμῖν οὐδὲ μελλονικιᾶν,

Ἄλλ' ὥς τάχιστα δεῖ τι δρᾶν· πρῶτον δέ τε

Εἰσέλθετ' εἰς νεοττιάν γε τὴν ἐμὴν

Καὶ τὰμὰ κάρφη καὶ τὰ παρόντα φρύγανα,

Καὶ τοῦνομ' ἡμῖν φράσατον.

ΠΕΙΣΘΕΤΑΙΡΟΣ.

Ἄλλὰ ῥάδιον. 645

Ἐμοὶ μὲν ὄνομα Πεισθέταιρος.

ΕΠΟΨ.

Τῷδεδίδι ;

ΠΕΙΣΘΕΤΑΙΡΟΣ.

Εὐελπίδης Κριῶθεν.

ΕΠΟΨ.

Ἄλλὰ χαίρετον

* Ἀμφω.

ΠΕΙΣΘΕΤΑΙΡΟΣ.

Δεχόμεσθα.

ΕΠΟΨ.

Δεῦρο τοῖνονν εἴσιτον.

ΠΕΙΣΘΕΤΑΙΡΟΣ.

* Ἰωμεν· εἰσηγοῦ σὺ λαβὼν ἡμᾶς.

ΕΠΟΨ.

Ἰθι.

ΠΕΙΣΘΕΤΑΙΡΟΣ.

Ατὰρ τὸ δεῖνα δεῦρ' ἐπανάκρουσαι πάλιν.
 Φέρ' ἴδω, φράσον νῶν, πῶς ἐγὼ τε χούτοσι
 Ξυνεσόμεθ' ὑμῖν πετομένοις οὐ πετομένω ;

650

ΕΠΟΨ.

Καλῶς.

ΠΕΙΣΘΕΤΑΙΡΟΣ.

Ὅρα νυν ὥς ἐν Αἰσώπου λόγους
 Ἔστιν λεγόμενον δὴ τι, τὴν ἀλώπεχ', ὥς
 Φλαύρως ἐκοινώνησεν ἀετῷ ποτέ.

ΕΠΟΨ.

Μηδὲν φοβηθῆς · ἔστι γάρ τι ρίζιον,
 Ὅ διατραγόντ' ἔσεσθον ἐπτερωμένω.

ΠΕΙΣΘΕΤΑΙΡΟΣ.

Οὔτω μὲν εἰσώμεν. Ἄγε δὴ, Ξανθία
 Καὶ Μανόδωρε, λαμβάνετε τὰ στρώματα.

ΧΟΡΟΣ.

Οὔτος, σε καλῶ σὲ καλῶ.

ΕΠΟΨ.

Τί καλεῖς ;

ΧΟΡΟΣ.

Τούτους μὲν ἄγων μετὰ σταντοῦ
 Ἀρίστισον εὖ · τὴν δ' ἡδυμελῆ ξύμφωνον ἀηδόνα Μούσαις Κατάλειψ' ἡμῖν δεῦρ' ἐκβιβάσας, ἵνα παίσωμεν μετ' ἐκείνης.

ΠΕΙΣΘΕΤΑΙΡΟΣ.

ὦ τοῦτο μέντοι νῆ Δί' αὐτοῖσιν πιθοῦ.

Ἐκβίβασον ἐκ τοῦ βουτόμου τοῦρνίθιον,

Ἐκβίβασον αὐτοῦ πρὸς θεῶν αὐτήν, ἴνα

665

Καὶ νὼ θεασώμεσθα τὴν ἀηδόνα.

ΕΠΟΥ.

Ἀλλ' εἰ δοκεῖ σφῶν, ταῦτα χρή δρᾶν. Ἡ Πρόκνη

Ἐκβαίνει, καὶ σαυτὴν ἐπιδείκνυ τοῖς ξένοις.

ΠΕΙΣΘΕΤΑΙΡΟΣ.

ὦ Ζεῦ πολυτίμηθ', ὡς καλὸν τοῦρνίθιον,

Ὡς δ' ἀπαλάν, ὡς δὲ λευκόν.

ΕΥΕΛΠΙΔΗΣ.

Ἄρά γ' οἶσθ' ὅτι

670

Ἐγὼ διαμηρίζοιμ' ἂν αὐτὴν ἡδέως;

ΠΕΙΣΘΕΤΑΙΡΟΣ.

Ὅσον δ' ἔχει τὸν χρυσόν, ὥσπερ παρθένος.

ΕΥΕΛΠΙΔΗΣ.

Ἐγὼ μὲν αὐτὴν καὶ φιλήσαι μοι δοκῶ.

ΠΕΙΣΘΕΤΑΙΡΟΣ.

Ἀλλ', ὦ κακόδαιμον, ρύγχος ὀβελίσκοιν ἔχει.

ΕΥΕΛΠΙΔΗΣ.

Ἀλλ' ὥσπερ φὸν νῆ Δί' ἀπολέψαντα χρή

675

Ἀπὸ τῆς κεφαλῆς τὸ λέμμα καθ' αὐτῷ φιλεῖν.

ΕΠΟΥ.

Ἰωμεν.

ΠΕΙΣΘΕΤΑΙΡΟΣ.

Ἠγοῦ δὴ σὺ νῶν τύχ' ἀγαθῇ.

ΧΟΡΟΣ.

ὦ φίλη, ὦ ξουθή, τῆς

ὦ φίλτατον ὀρνέων,

Πάντων ξύννομε τῶν ἐμῶν

680

Ἑμνων ξύντροφ' ἀηδοῖ,

Ἥλθες ἡλθες, ὦ φθης,

Ἡδὺν φθογγὸν ἐμοὶ φέρουσ'.

Ἄλλ', ὦ καλλιβόαν κρέκουσ' ἄλκι

Αὐλὸν φθέγμασιν ἡρινοῖς,

685

Ἄρχου τῶν ἀναπαίστων.

Ἄγε δὴ φύσιν ἄνδρες ἀμαυρόβιοι, φύλλων γενεᾷ προσόμεοι,

Ὀλιγοδρανέες, πλάσματα πηλοῦ, σκιοειδέα φύλ' ἀμενηνά,

Ἀπτῆνες ἐφημέριοι, ταλαοὶ βροτοί, ἀνέρες εἰκελόνειροι,

Πρόσχετε τὸν νοῦν τοῖς ἀθανάτοις ἡμῖν, τοῖς αἰὲν ἐούσι,

690

Τοῖς αἰθερίοις, τοῖσιν ἀγέρως, τοῖς ἄφθιτα μηδομένοισιν

Ἴν' ἀκούσαντες πάντα παρ' ἡμῶν ὀρθῶς περὶ τῶν μετεώρων,

Χάους τε

Εἰδότες ὀρθῶς παρ' ἐμοῦ Προδίκῳ κλάειν εἶπητε τὸ λοιπόν.

Χάος ἦν καὶ Νυξ Ἐρεβός τε μέλαν πρῶτον καὶ Τάρταρος εὐρύς.

695

Γῇ δ' οὐδ' ἀῆρ οὐδ' οὐρανὸς ἦν · Ἐρέβους δ' ἐν ἀπείροσι κόλποις

Τίκτει πρώτιστον ὑπὴνέμιον Νύξ ἢ μελανόπτερος ὥν, Ἐξ οὗ περιτελλομέναις ὥραις ἔβλασεν Ἔρως ὁ ποθει-νός,

Στίλβων νῶτον πτερύγων χρυσαῖν, εἰκὼς ἀνεμώκεσι δίναις.

Οὗτος δὲ Χάει πτερόεντι μιγείς νυχίῃ κατὰ Τάρταρον εὐρὺν 700

Ἐνέοττευσεν γένος ἡμέτερον, καὶ πρῶτον ἀνήγαγεν ἐς φῶς.

Πρότερον δ' οὐκ ἦν γένος ἀθανάτων, πρὶν Ἔρως ξυνε-μιξεν ἅπαντα.

Ἐυμμιγνυμένων δ' ἐτέρων ἐτέροις γένετ' οὐρανὸς ὠκεανός τε

 ἐσμεν Ἔρωτος 705

Πολλοῖς δῆλον· πετόμεσθ' αὖτε γὰρ καὶ τοῖσιν ἐρώσι σύνεσμεν.

Πολλοὺς δὲ καλοὺς ἀπομωμοκότας παῖδας πρὸς τέρμασιν ὥρας

Διὰ τὴν ἰσχὺν τὴν ἡμετέραν διεμήρισαν ἄνδρες ἐρασταί, Ὁ μὲν ὄρτυγα δούς, ὁ δὲ πορφυρίων, ὁ δὲ χῆν, ὁ δὲ Περσικὸν ὄρνιν.

Πάντα δὲ θνητοῖς ἐστὶν ἀφ' ἡμῶν τῶν ὀρνίθων τὰ μέ-γιστα. 710

Πρῶτα μὲν ὥρας φαίνομεν ἡμεῖς ἦρος, χειμῶνος, ὁπώ-ρας.

Σπείρειν μέν, ὅταν γέρας κρώζουσ' ἐς τὴν Λιβύην μεταχωρῇ·

Καὶ πηδάλιον τότε ναυκλήρῳ φράζει κρεμάσαντι καθεύδων,

Εἴτα δ' Ὀρέστη χλαῖναν ὑφαίνειν, ἵνα μὴ ῥιγῶν ἀπο-δύη.

Ἰκτῖνος δ' αὖ μετὰ ταῦτα φανείς ἐτέραν ὥραν ἀποφαίνει, 715

Ἡνίκα πεκτεῖν ὥρα προβάτων πόκον ἡρινύν· εἴτα χε-λιδών,

Ὅτε χρὴ χλαῖναν πωλεῖν ἤδη καὶ ληδάριον τι πρίασθαι.

Ἔσμεν δ' ὑμῖν Ἀμμων, Δελφοί, Δωδώνη, Φοῖβος Ἀπόλλων.

Ἐλθόντες γὰρ πρῶτον ἐπ' ὄρνις, οὕτω πρὸς ἅπαντα τρέπεσθε,

Πρὸς τ' ἐμπορίαν καὶ πρὸς βιότου κτήσιν· καὶ πρὸς
γάμον ἀνδρός· 720

Ὅρνιν τε νομίζετε πάνθ' ὅσα περ περὶ μαντείας δια-κρίνει·

Φήμη γ' ὑμῖν ὄρνις ἐστί, πταρμός τ' ὄρνιθα καλεῖτε,

Ξύμβολον ὄρνιν, φωνὴν ὄρνιν, θεράποντ' ὄρνιν, ὄνον ὄρνιν.

Ἄρ οὐ φανερώς ἡμεῖς ὑμῖν ἔσμεν μαντεῖος Ἀπόλλων;

Ἦν οὖν ἡμᾶς νομίσητε θεούς, 725

Ἐξετε χρῆσθαι μάντεσι, Μούσαις,

Μετρίῳ πνίγει· κούκ ἀποδράντες

Καθεδούμεθ' ἄνω σεμνυνόμενοι

Παρά ταῖς νεφέλαις ὥσπερ χῶ Ζεὺς·

730

Ἀλλὰ παρόντες δώσομεν ὑμῖν,

Αὐτοῖς, παισὶν, παίδων παισίν,

Πλουθυγίαν, ~~ἡμεῖς, ἡμεῖς~~

Εὐδαιμονίαν, βίον, εἰρήνην,

Νεότητα, γέλωτα, χορούς, θαλίαν, ~~ἡμεῖς~~

735

Γάλα τ' ὀρνίθων.

Ὡστε παρέσται κοπιᾶν ὑμῖν

Ἐπὶ τῶν ἀγαθῶν·

Οὕτω πλουτήσετε πάντες.

NOTES

NOTES.

IN the opening scene, two old Athenians appear, named Euelpides and Peisthetairos. Wearied with the annoyances to which they have been subjected in their native city, they leave it to search for Epos, the king of the birds, who was connected with the Attic traditions, under the mythical name of Tereus. They have taken with them, as guides of their journey, a raven and a jackdaw, which have led them up and down over a rough and rocky country, until the fugitives are jaded out by the fatigues of the way, and begin to scold about the cheating poulterer who has sold them, for an obol and a three-obol piece, a pair of birds good for nothing but to bite. At length they reach the forest and the steep rocks, which shut them from all farther progress.

Line 1. Ὀρθήν. This agrees with ὀδόν, to be constructed with ίέναι, or some similar verb. Dost thou bid me go straight up? — addressed to the jackdaw. For the ellipsis of the substantive, see Kühner, § 263.

2. Διαρρήγεις. G. § 82. This is addressed, as a sort of humorous imprecation, to Euelpides. The word occurs frequently in the orators, especially Demosthenes, to express a violent passion or effort of the person to whom it is applied; as, for instance, οὐδ' ἂν διαρρήγῃς ψευδόμενος, "not even if you split with lying." Translate here, May you split. — ἦδε,

i. e. κορώνη, but this raven. — πάλιν, back, in the opposite direction.

3. πλανίττομεν. A Scholiast speaks of this word as Attic for πλανώμεθα; and Suidas, cited by Bothe, considers it as a comic usage; perhaps it may be rendered, Why are we tramping?

4. ἄλλως = μάτην, to no purpose.

5, 6. Τὸ . . . περιελθεῖν. For the construction of the infinitive in sentences expressing exclamation, see G. § 104. For the force of the Aorist, see G. § 23, 1, N. 1. See also Clouds, 268, note.

10. ἀν ἐξέυροις. G. § 52, 2.

11. Οὐδ' ἂν . . . Ἐξεkestίδης, Not even Exekestides could perceive the country hence. G. § 42, 3, N. 2; § 53, N. 3. The name of this person occurs in two other places of the play, lines 766 and 1512. He was often introduced by the comic writers, and satirized as a person of barbarian origin, who had by fraudulent means got himself enrolled among the Athenian citizens. The meaning of the answer of Peisthetairos, then, is, "We are farther off than Exekestides: even he could not discern Athens from this spot." "It would puzzle Exekestides himself to make out Athens from here."

13. οὐκ τῶν ὀρνέων, he of the birds; i. e. the bird-seller or poulterer. The expression is like that applied to Hyperbolus in the Clouds (1065), οὐκ τῶν λύχνων, the dealer in lamps. There is also an allusion here, and in line 16, to the town of Orneae, in Argolis, which was destroyed by a combined force of Argives and Athenians, after a siege of one day, in 416 B. C. (two years before the exhibition of the Birds). See Thucyd., VI. 7, where the expression ἐκ τῶν Ὀρνέων occurs. The memory of this recent event made the allusion particularly applicable. The explanation given by the Scholiast — that the two Athenians are made to suffer ἐκ τῶν ὀρνέων, because Ὀρνεαί is in Laconia (?), and the Athenians had recently suffered a loss at Mantinea—is impossible, from the circumstance that the people of Ὀρνεαί assisted the Athenians at the battle of Mantinea. See Thucyd., V. 67, and Arnold's note.

14. Ὁ μελαγχολῶν, The poulterer Philocrates, being mad. Philocrates would seem to have been well known as a dealer in birds in the Athenian market. He is again introduced by the Chorus (v. 1070), where a reward of one talent is offered for any one who will kill him; for any one who will take him alive, four talents;—his various offences against the race of birds being enumerated.

15. ἔφασκε φράσσειν. G. § 73, 1; § 27.

16. ὅς ὀρνέων. This refers, of course, to the fable of the metamorphosis of Tereus into the Epops, or Hoopoo, for which see Ovid, Metam., VI. 423, seq. With regard to the Hoopoo, or Huppoo, Cary (Preface to Translation of the Birds) has the following note. "As this bird acts a principal part in the play, the reader may not be displeased to see the following description of it: 'At Penyrhiw, the farm to which this wild, uncultivated tract is a sheep-walk, was lately shot a Huppoo, a solitary bird, two being seldom seen together, and in this kingdom very uncommon; even in Egypt, where common, not very gregarious. Bewick's description of it is very correct. Upupa of Linnaeus, la Hupe of Buffon. This bird is of the order of Picae; its length twelve inches, breadth nineteen; bill above two inches long, black, slender, and somewhat curved; eyes hazel; tongue very short and triangular; head ornamented with a crest, consisting of a double row of feathers of pale orange color, tipped with black; highest about two inches long; neck pale reddish brown, breast and belly white; back, scapulars, and wings crossed with broad bars of black and white; lesser coverts of the wings light brown, rump white; the tail consists of ten feathers, each marked with white, which, when closed, assumes the form of a crescent, the horns pointing downwards; legs short and black. Crest usually falls behind on its neck, except when surprised, and then erect, agreeing exactly with Pliny's character of it. "Crista visenda plicatili, contrahens eam subrigensque per longitudinem capitis," whose annotator, Dalecampius, mentions another curious particular of this bird: "Nidum ex stercore humano præcipue conficit." Bewick, Vol. I. 262; Plin. Variorum, 688. In Sweden, the appearance of this bird is vulgarly considered as a presage of war, and it was formerly deemed in our country a forerunner of some calamity.' — Historical Tour through Pembrokeshire, by Richard Fenton, Esq., p. 17. London, 4to, 1810. The particular mentioned by Dalecampius is observed by Aristotle also, who adds that the bird changes its appearance summer and winter, as most of the other wild birds do." Von der Mühle (Beiträge zur Ornithologie Griechenlands, p. 34) says of the Epops, that it is found in great numbers in Greece, in the month of September, but more seldom in spring; that it is fond of the oleanders near the coast, &c.

What is the point of the phrase ἐκ τῶν ὀρνέων, in this place, has been a question. The Scholiast explains it παρ' ὑπόνοιαν· ἔδει γὰρ ἐκ τῶν ἀνθρώπων; i. e. instead of saying he was changed from a man to a bird, the poet gives an unexpected turn to the words and says, who became a bird from — the birds. Bergler's opinion is, "Videtur voce ὀρνεα metaphorice significare homines superbos aut leves et inconstantes; hoc sensu: ex homine superbo, aut levi et inconstante, factus est ales superbus, aut levis et inconstans." Perhaps the explanation of the Scholiast, and that of Bergler combined with the remark of Cary, that "this is intended as a stroke of satire on the levity of the Athenians," may suggest the true meaning of the poet, especially as the general bearing of the play is to be explained by the circumstances and relations of Athenian affairs. See note to v. 13.

17. Θαρρέλειδου, i. e. υἱόν, this son of Tharreleides. The jackdaw is called the son of Tharreleides, according to some, because of the loquacity of that individual, whose name was Asopodoros; according to others, from his small stature, or some other point in which a resemblance might be found or fancied.

18. ὀβολοῦ πρωβολου. Genitive of price.

19. ἄρ'. For the conclusive signification of ἄρα, see the exact analysis of Hartung, "De Particulis," Vol. I. pp. 448, 449. See also Kühner, § 324, 3. In this place it implies a sort of consequence of the preceding statement; as if he intended to say that the vicious tricks of the birds were nothing more than might have been expected from the character of the man who sold them. Translate the whole line, And they accordingly were nothing but biting.

20. κέχηνας, addressed to the jackdaw. — κατὰ τῶν πετρῶν, down the rocks.

22. ἄτραπός, a track, or path; ὁδός is a road, way, or street.

28. Ἐς κόρακας ἐλθεῖν. There is a pun upon the double meaning of the phrase, which is commonly used as a jocose imprecation, Go to the crows, but here alludes also to the intention of the two old men to visit the city of the birds.

29. Ἐπειτα. For the use of this particle in questions of astonishment, see Kühner, § 344, 5 (e).

30. Ζυγρες λόγῳ. The expression is said to be borrowed from debates in the political assemblies; but it was as well applied to listeners to any discussion whatever, and is here familiarly transferred to the spectators of the comic representation.

31. Νόσον νοσοῦμεν. The common Greek construction

NOTES.

he accusative of kindred signification. — Σακῆ. A com-name for slaves and servants of barbarian origin, pararly Thracians; here applied to a tragic poet named stor, on account of his being a foreigner. In the Cyrolia it is the name of the cupbearer of King Astyages.

2. εἰσβάλλεται, is forcing himself in; i. e. is constantly ing to thrust himself into the number of legal citizens.

s of citizenship were guarded at Athens, see, besides tas.

3. φυλῇ καὶ γίνεи. For the political meaning of these 3, see Hermann's Staatsalterthümer (Political Antiqui-§ 94, and §§ 97, 98; and Grote, Vol. III. Chap. 10.

4. σοβοῦντος. This participle applies particularly to the ng away of birds, though used metaphorically to ex-the act of frightening off, in general. Ἀνεπτόμεσθα, in ollowing line, is also used in a similar way; and ἀμφοῖν is a comic inconsistency with the previous expression.
ould say, using language metaphorically, We flew away the country, but instead of adding with both wings, he bliged to substitute with both feet, they having not yet accommodated with the wings.

5. ἐκείνην, emphatically, "that great city."

6. μὴ οὐ. For the use of this double negative, see G.
3; § 95, 2, N. 1 (b).

7. Καὶ ἐναπορίσαι, And common to all—to pay their money in; i. e. to waste money in lawsuits, is the more specific meaning of ἀπορίειν. G. § 97, 93, 2. The poet ingeniously and wittily combines in dicule of this line one of the great boasts of the Athe, namely, the liberality with which the city's resources struction and amusement were opened to all comers a particular detail of which see the funeral oration of Pericles in Thucydides, II. 35-46; and the Panegyricus of Isocrates, pp. 15, 16, Felton's edition, and notes), and the notorious love of litigation for which the Athenians were so often reproached, and which Aristophanes exposed with infinite spirit and drollery in the "Wasps."

39. τέττιγες. The chirping of the cicadae or τέττιγες is a subject of frequent allusion in the Greek poets, from Homer down. See Iliad, III. 151, and note upon the passage. For a description of the insect, and the ancient, though erroneous, idea of its habits, see Aristotle, Hist. An., Lib. IV. 7. Particularly, he speaks of it as living on dew, — τῇ δρόσῳ τρέφεται, — on which compare the Anacreontic ode, No. 32 (43), — ὀλίγην δρόσον πεπωκώς, βασιλεὺς ὅπως ἀείδεις. See also the note of Strack, pp. 182 and 183 of his German translation of Aristotle. The manner in which the sound called singing by Aristotle and the poets is produced, is explained Lib. IV. c. 9. Swammerdam has the following statement: "Cicada duobus gaudet exiguis tympanis peculiaribus, nostro auris tympano similibus, quae duarum ope cartilaginum lunatarum percussa, aerem ita vibrant ut sonitus inde reddatur." Bibl. Nat., p. 504; cited by Camus, Vol. II. p. 230.

40. Ἐπὶ τῶν κραδῶν ᾄδουσι. Aristotle, Lib. V. 30, says of the cicadae, "Οὐ γίνονται δὲ τέττιγες ὅπου μὴ δένδρα ἐστίν"; he adds, "There are none in the plain of Cyrene, but there are many round the city, and chiefly where there are olive-trees."

41. τῶν δικῶν. See note to line 38.

44. ἀπράγμονα, free from trouble, particularly vexatious lawsuits.

45. καθιδρυθέντε διαγενοίμεθα. For the participle expressing a condition, see G. § 109, 6; § 52, 1. Dawes proposed the present διαγινοίμεθα; but when we consider that the idea of the verb may be conceived either as continuous or as momentary, there seems no necessity for any change, unless upon the authority of some good manuscript.

46, 47. τὸν τόν. The repetition of the article, before both the name and the further designation, emphasizes them, the Tereus; that ancient Tereus, well known to the Athenian people, who was changed into the Epops.

48. ἧ, used adverbially, where he has flown; i. e. if he has ever seen such a city in all his travels.

49, 50. πάλαι φράζει. By a common idiom, the present is used with an adverb of the past to mean has been doing and is still doing; here, has been this long time talking up. G. § 10, 1, N. 3.

51. ὥσπερὶ δεικνύς, as if he were showing (= ὥσπερ ἂν ἔχαιεν, εἰ ἐδείκνυ). G. § 109, N. 3 (b). Sometimes the more complete form ὥσπερ ἂν εἰ is used in such expressions; but generally we find only ὥσπερ. G. § 53, N. 3.

52. Κοὺκ οὐκ. The combination of particles intensifies the expression, There is not how there are not; i. e. It must be that there are.

53. ποιήσωμεν. G. § 50, 1. Observe the force of the aorist in the subjunctive to express a single act. The present here would imply a repetition. See G., Rem. before § 12.

54. οἷσθ' ὃ δρᾶσον; For an explanation of this idiom, see G. § 84, N. 3. It occurs frequently in the Attic writers, especially the tragic poets. See Soph. Oed. Tyr., 543; Eurip. Med., 605, &c. There seems to be a combination of two phrases in one: οἷσθ' ὃ δεῖ δρᾶσαι; δρᾶσον. The third person of the imperative is also used in the same way. See the same expression, v. 80. — σκέλει πέτρᾳ. The Scholiast, cited by Bothe, says there was a proverbial expression among the boys, Δὸς τὸ σκέλος τῇ πέτρᾳ καὶ πεσοῦνται τὰ ὄρνεα, Give your leg to the rock and the birds will fall; not unlike the modern notion of catching birds by sprinkling salt on their tails.

57. τί οὗτος; What do you say, fellow? — παῖ, the common form of addressing a servant, and therefore considered as disrespectful to Epops.

58. ἐχρῆν καλεῖν. Ought you not to call him, &c.? A protasis is implied, if you were respectful, or the like. See G. § 49, 2, N. 3.

61. τοῦ χασμήματος, what a yawn! For genitive of exclamation, see K. § 274, α. Comp. also Clouds, v. 153, and note to the passage.

63. Οὕτως λέγειν; Bothe punctuates the line without the interrogation; — Οὐδὲ κάλλιον ἐστὶ λέγειν τι οὕτω δεινόν, Aliquid tam terribile ne nominare quidem decet; “’T were better not even to mention so terrible a thing.” But the position of the words and the natural construction of δέ in οὐδέ conflicts with the interpretation. Several other explanations are given. The Scholiast says: “Οὕτωςί τι δεινόν οὐδὲ κάλλιον λέγειν, τουτέστιν, οὕτω δεινόν ἔχομεν ἐκ τῆς ὀψεως, ὥστε ὀρνευθῆναι νομίζεσθαι. Οὐδὲ λέγειν σε τοῦτό ἐστι κάλλιον, ὅτι ἐσμὲν ὀρνευθῆναι”; i. e. We have something so fearful in our look as to be thought bird-hunters; but it is not very handsome for you to say that we are bird-hunters. Taking the present punctuation, which is upon the whole more suitable to the connection, we must refer the words to the alarm manifested and expressed by the Trochilos, and we may translate, Is there anything so dreadful (i. e. in our appearance), and (have you) nothing handsomer to say? i. e. Are we so frightful that you have nothing better to say to us than that?

64. ἀπολείσθον. Fut. Indic. See G. § 25, 1, N. 5.

65. Ὑποδεδιώς. A fictitious name for a bird; further designated as a strange fowl by the following epithet, Διβυκόν.

66. Οὐδὲν λέγεις, You say nothing to the purpose. You talk nonsense. For this sense of the phrase, see Clouds,

v. 644. — ἱροῦ ποδῶν. "Roga illa quae vides in cruribus meis, quae testabuntur me esse avem timidam." Bergler. The Scholiast says: "Δέγει δὲ ὡς ὑπὸ τοῦ δέους ἐναφεικῶς."

68. Ἐπικεχodῶς. Another name, similarly formed. "Καὶ τοῦτο ὡς ὄρνιθος ἐπαίξε παρὰ τὸ φαίνεσθαι αὐτοῦ τὸ σκῶρ." Sch. "Qui insuper etiam cacavit prae timore, ut prior ille." Bergler.

69. σύ. Euelpides turns upon the bird. σύ is emphatic, but you.

70, 71. Ἡττήθης Ἀλεκτρύωνος; It is stated by Voss, that after the Persian wars cock-fighting was introduced into Athens, and that the birds were brought, as an article of commerce, from Ionia. The conquered bird was called the δοῦλος. Voss, cited by Bothe. Becker (Charicles, p. 64, note 6, English translation) touches upon the subject, and gives the authorities. See also St. John's Manners and Customs of the Ancient Greeks, Vol. I. p. 190, and the references in the note, ib. The construction of the genitive is the same as after the comparative ἡσσων, which is implied by the verb. The Scholiast says: "Φυσικὸν τοῦτο ἐν ταῖς σομβολαῖς τῶν ἀλεκτρύωνων, τοὺς ἡττηθέντας ἔπεσθαι τοῖς νενικηκόσι."

73. ἔν' ἔχῃ. For the Subjunctive after a secondary tense, see G. § 44, 2.

74. γάρ. The particle implies the ellipsis of some expression intimating surprise on the part of the speaker. Here the spirit of it may be rendered by What! does a bird, &c.

75. γε is here an emphasizing particle, implying that, whatever may be the case with others, Epops certainly, as having once been a man, cannot do without a servant. — ὦν is an Imperfect Participle. G. § 16, 2. For ἀρε, see G. § 109, N. 3 (a).

76. ἀφύας. This name embraces several small species of fish, such as anchovies and sardines. For an account of them, see Aristotle, Hist. An., VI. 14, 2 and 3. According to Archestratos, in Athenaeus, those produced in the neighborhood of Athens were most highly prized. Chrysippus, cited by the same author, says that they were used as articles of food only by the poorer classes of the Athenians, though in other cities those of an inferior quality were greatly admired. Athen. VII.

79. Τροχίλος. There is here a play upon the name, in reference to τρέχω in the preceding lines, — the running bird.

80. Οἷσθ' οὖν ὃ δρᾶσον. See note to line 54.

84. Ὅτι . . . ἐπεγεῶ. After uttering these words, the Trochilos disappears in the woods to wake up Epops, and the dialogue continues between the two friends.

85. Κακῶς . . . δέει. Addressed to the Trochilos as he goes away. The fear, in this and in the reply of Euelpides, is caused by the tremendous opening of the beak of Trochilos. For ἀπόλοιτο, see G. § 82. (Compare v. 2.)

86. μ' οἷχεται, i. e. μοι οἷχεται, unless, indeed, οἷχομαι may, like φεύγω, be constructed with an accusative of the person. The latter is the view adopted by Kühner (Jelf's Tr.), § 548, Obs. 1.

88. δαίσας = ὑπὸ τοῦ δέους, v. 87. G. § 109, 4.

90. γάρ. For this particle in questions, see K. § 324, 2. Here it is equivalent to then; as, Where then is he?

91. ἄρ' is to be understood as spoken in an ironical tone. — ὥς . . . εἰ, what a brave fellow you are!

92. Ἄνοιγε . . . ποτέ. The voice of Epops is heard, giving orders, in a tone of ludicrous importance, to open, not the door, but the woods, that he, the king of the birds, may come out.

95, 96. Οἱ . . . σε. The usual formula of introducing the twelve gods (by which are meant the twelve principal gods in the Attic worship) is in the invocation of blessings ; but here, as the commentators remark, the tone is suddenly changed, and the ludicrous appearance of Epops, with his enormous crest and his feathers moulted, extorts from Euelpides the exclamation, that the twelve gods must have been afoul of him. Εἴξασιν = εὐόκασιν. See Clouds, 341. For the Aorist Infinitive referring to the past, see G. § 23, 2.

97. γάρ. The particle here introduces an explanation of some idea to be mentally supplied, such as, "Don't laugh, O strangers, for I was once a man."

99. Τὸ ῥάμφος. The jest consists in saying, "We are not laughing at you ; your beak seems to us ridiculous."

100, 101. Τοιαῦτα . . . Τηρέα. The subject of the metamorphosis of Tereus and Procne appears to have been treated by the tragic poets more than once. A Scholiast says that Sophocles employed it first, and Philocles, who is alluded to in the present play (v. 280), handled it afterwards. There are remaining ten or a dozen fragments of the play of Sophocles, the largest of which contains twelve lines. See Dindorf's Poetae Scenici, Fragmenta 511–526. The poet, who was an ardent admirer of Aeschylus and Sophocles, yet takes occasion to make a good-humored hit at both of them.

102. ὄρνις ἢ ταῶς ; The first means either bird in general, or specifically cock or hen. Something like the spirit of the question may be given by rendering it, Are you a cock or a peacock ? but the reply of Epops takes the word in its general sense.

105. πάντα. "Mentitur," says Bothe, "sed coram hominibus urbanis, quibus quidvis ejusmodi videtur persuaderi posse." With regard to the plumage of Epops, the Scholiast says, "Παρ' ὅσον ἄνθρωπος ἐξελήλυθε, μὴ ἔχων πτερὰ πλὴν τῆς κεφαλῆς ἐπτερωμένης ὄρνιθος," referring to the manner in which the actor personated Epops.

108. Ὅθεν καλαί. The allusion is to the boast and pride of the Athenians, — their naval power. It has a special point here, because the splendid armament equipped for the Sicilian Expedition had so recently sailed from the Peiraeus.

109, 110. ἡλιαστά, Ἀπηλιαστά. The Heliastic court was the most important among the judicial institutions of Athens. For a particular account of it, see Hermann's Political Antiquities, § 134, seqq.; Meier and Schömann's Attischer Process, Book II. Chap. 1; Schömann's Griech. Alterthümer, V. pp. 477, seqq. Clouds, 863, note; Champlin's Demosthenes de Corona, Notes, pp. 109, 110; Schömann's Assemblies of the Athenians, § 92. Epops, as soon as he has heard that his visitors are Athenians, immediately thinks of the most prominent characteristic of an Athenian citizen; namely, his quality of member of a court. The word ἀπηλιαστής expresses the opposite of ἡλιαστής, and seems to have been made for the occasion, — one who is averse to the courts. The point of the reply cannot be given briefly in English. Something like it would be this: "Are you jurymen?" "No; but, on the other tack, anti-jurymen." — Μάλλά = μά ἀλλά. The elliptical use of μά occurs generally with the article. Another reading here is Μὰ Δία · θατέρου τρόπου, &c.

110. γάρ, in the question here, though strictly used in an elliptical way, is equivalent to the expression of surprise, what!

111. Τὸ σπέρμ'. The language ascribed to Epops refers to his character of bird, though the word also means race, — as seed is often used in the Bible for race or descendants. — ζητῶν (= εἰ ζητοῖς) forms the Protasis to ἂν λάβοις. G. § 109, 6; § 52, 1.

115–118. ὤφειλσας, ἔχαιρες, ἐπεπέτου. Observe the change from the aorist, expressing the completed fact, to the imperfect, indicating the habit or general fact.

120. ταῦτ'. A common construction = διὰ ταῦτα. See Clouds, 319.

121. εἴ τινα φράσεις, in case you should have some city to tell us of. G. § 53, N. 2.

122. ἐγκατακλινῆναι μαλθακῇ, soft to repose in. G. § 93, 2. The idiom of the Greek here corresponds exactly with the English.

123. Κραναῶν. The epithet here applied to Athens has been variously explained: 1. As derived from the ancient mythical king, Kranaos. 2. As referring to the rocky surface of Attica. The latter is clearly its meaning in many places; here it is a jesting antithesis to μαλθακῇ.

125, 126. Ἀριστοκρατεῖσθαι βδελύττομαι. There are two points intended to be made here. First, the imputation of aristocracy, which at Athens, as well as in republican France, was an efficient means of terror; and, second, a pun on the name of Aristocrates, the son of Skellias. This person was a man of much distinction at Athens, who passed through many vicissitudes in his life, for which his name is used as an illustration by Socrates in the Gorgias of Plato, p. 472, A. (See Woolsey's note to the passage.) He was a member of the oligarchical party, and belonged to the government of the Four Hundred. In B. C. 407 he was associated with Alcibiades as one of the commanders of the Athenian land forces. The next year, he was one of the generals who were brought to trial and put death after the battle of Arginousae. He is mentioned by Demosthenes, in Theocrin., p. 1343, 4; by Xenophon, Hellenica, I. 4, 5-7; and by many others. For δηλός ἐστι ζῆτων, see G. § 113, N. 1.

127. Ποίαν τιν'. The interrogative and indefinite thus combined mean, What sort of a city, &c.

128. ὅπου εἴη is a protasis, with the preceding line understood as the apodosis. G. § 61, 4.

131. Ὅπως παρέσει. For the elliptical use of ὅπως with the future indic. in exhortations, see G. § 45, N. 7. See Clouds, v. 257. Bothe remarks: "Hac formula vel simili apud Graecos utebantur illi, qui aliquem invitabant ad convivium quo sensu Latini quoque dicere solebant hodie apud me sis volo, vel una simus."

132. μέλλω . . . γάμους, to give a marriage-feast, the construction being the cognate accusative. For an account of marriage-feasts, see St. John, Ancient Greeks, Vol. II. pp. 19, 174. For the marriage ceremonies in general, see Becker's Charicles, Scene XII., and Excursus to the same. Isaeus, De Ciron. Hered., § 9, has the expression, "Καὶ γάμους εἰ διττοὺς ὑπὲρ ταύτης εἰστίασεν ἢ μὴ," in speaking of the proofs of a marriage. See Schömann's notes to § 9, and to § 18.

133. μηδαμῶς ποιήσης. G. § 86. εἰ δὲ μὴ. G. § 52, 1, N. 2.

134. Μὴ . . . κακῶς. The Scholiast says this line is a witty perversion of the proverb against those who do not visit their friends in time of trouble; the proverb being Μὴ μοι τότ' ἔλθης, ὅταν ἐγὼ πράττω καλῶς, "Do not come to me then, when I am doing well." G. § 61, 3.

135. ταλαιπῶρων, miserable, ironically applied.

136. δαί. For the force of this particle, see Kühner, § 315, 7. — Τοιούτων, such; not referring, according to the general usage, to the preceding, but to the following, enumeration of objects to be desired. See K. § 303, R. 1.

137–142. The Scholiast, in speaking of the wishes of the two old Athenians, says: "Ὁ μὲν τὰς τῆς γαστρὸς τρυφὰς ἐβούλετο, ὁ δὲ τὰς αἰσχροὺς ἡδονάς." It is sufficient to say of the passage, that it is one of many in Aristophanes founded upon the unnatural vices which (unknown to Homer) marked the social morals of the historical ancients, and the increase of which, in progress of time, accelerated the downfall of both Greece and Rome. The subject is partially illustrated in Becker's Charicles. It is also discussed in its bearings upon the population of the ancient states by Zumpt, in an able essay entitled, "Über den Stand der Bevölkerung und die Volksvermehrung im Alterthum," pp. 13–17. See also, in the Classical Studies, pp. 314–354, Frederick Jacobs on the "Moral Education of the Greeks," and note, pp. 411–413.

143. τῶν κακῶν. Genitive of exclamation.

145. Παρὰ θάλατταν. There is probably here some allusion to the profligate manners of the Orientals, like those of Sodom and Gomorrah. Bothe cites, in illustration of this view, Herod. III. 101, and adds: "Id quidem certe significare voluit (i. e. Aristophanes), amores istos nefandos barbaris digniores esse quam Graecis."

146, 147. Ἡμῖν Σαλαμινία. The Athenians had two sacred triremes, called the Paralos and the Salaminia, which were used on a variety of public occasions, and their crews were paid high wages at the public expense. (See Boeckh's Public Economy of the Athenians, Book II. Chap. 16.) They were sent on the theoria, and sometimes carried ambassadors to their place of destination. The Salaminia was employed, as it would appear from this passage and from the remarks of a Scholiast on it, to bring to Athens persons ordered thither for trial. The Paralos was sometimes used for the same purpose. There is also here a special allusion to the recall of Alcibiades on a charge of having mutilated the statues of Hermes, he having already departed with the armament for the Sicilian Expedition. Thucyd. VI. 53: Καὶ καταλαμβάνουσι τὴν Σαλαμινίαν ναῦν ἐκ τῶν Ἀθηνῶν ἤκουσαν ἐπὶ τε Ἀλκιβιάδην, ὡς κελεύουσας ἀποπλεῖν ἐς ἀπολογία ὧν ἡ πόλις ἐνεκάλει, κ. τ. λ. See also Thirlwall's History of Greece, Vol. III. pp. 390, seq.; and Grote, Vol. VII. Chap. 58. — κλητῆρ'. This term was commonly applied to those who acted as witnesses to the fact, that the prosecutor had personally summoned his opponent to appear in court on a certain day. (See Meier and Schömann, Attic Process, B. IV. Cap. 2.) If, however, the defendant was out of the country, so that the plaintiff could not summon him in person, a special summons was sent by one of the public triremes, and the servants of the court who served such a summons were also called κλητῆρες. This happened in the case of Alcibiades; and it is in this sense that κλητῆρ is used here. For the ordinary process of summoning (πρόσκλησις or κλήσις), see Clouds, 495, 496, note; also Hermann's Political Antiquities, § 140.

149. Ἡλεῖον Δέπρεον. This city is mentioned in Pausanias, Eliaca, I. c. 5. Four years before this comedy was brought upon the stage, the town was occupied by the Lacedaemonians, who established some of their manumitted Helots there. The old Athenians, fleeing from the oppression of the Attic democracy, are advised to take refuge in a city inhabited by liberated slaves. The name gives an opportunity for a pun in the following lines.

150. ὅς οὐκ ἰδὼν βδελύττομαι. G. § 59, N. 2. The sentence begun with οὐτί, because, is not finished.

151. τὸν Δέπρεον . . . Μελανθίου. Melanthios, the tragic poet, is said by the Scholiast to have been ridiculed by the comic writers for his vices and for being afflicted with leprosy (λεπρός). He is also said to have been a native of the Elean city.

152, 153. Ὀπούντιοι, Ὀπούντιος. The name of the Locrian Opuntians appears to have been selected merely for the opportunity of a punning sarcasm upon a man bearing the name of Opountios, said by the Scholiast to have been a stupid fellow with only one eye.

154. ἐπὶ ταλάντῳ, at the rate of a talent. See Mtt. § 585, b. β. G. § 52, 1.

157, 158. βαλαντίου κιβδηλίαν. The idea of living without a purse, that is, without money, immediately suggests the other idea of falsification or adulteration of the coin; and so the word κιβδηλία is naturally used in a metaphorical sense for fraud or dishonesty.

159 – 161. Νεμόμεσθα βίον. For an account of the festivities and rejoicings in celebration of marriage, see St. John's work above cited, Vol. II. pp. 18, seq. Bothe quotes, in illustration, from Ovid, Fasti, IV. 869, "Cumque sua dominae date grata Sisymbria myrto."

164. πίθουσθέ. Observe the particular force of the aorist, If you listen to my advice; not generally, but in the particular case now to be considered. The same specific limitation is to be noted in the repetitions of the word in the following line.

165. Τί πιθώμεσθ'; G. § 88. ὁ τι πίθησθε (sc. ἐρωτᾷτε); is the same question in an indirect form. G. § 71.

166. Μὴ περιπέτεσθε. G. § 86. (See v. 133.)

167. Αὐτίκα, just for example. "Οἷον εὐθέως," says the Scholiast.

168. Ἐκεῖ παρ' ἡμῖν, there (i. e. at Athens, whence we have just fled) among us, men, or Athenians. — τοὺς πετομένους, accusative for genitive with περὶ; illustrated by the Scholiast, who cites a similar construction from Homer. The phrase is used in application to flighty persons.

169. Τελέας. According to the Scholiast, he was a person much ridiculed for his inconstant character and his infamous vices.

170. Ἀνθρωπος ὄρνις, according to Bothe = ὄρνιθις ἄνθρωπος, a man-bird.

173. Τί ἂν ποιοῖμεν; G. § 52, 2, N.

175. Ἀληθεῖς, Ha! sayest thou so? See Clouds, 841.

176. Καὶ δῆ. For the various senses in which these two particles are used in connection, see Hartung, Vol. I. pp. 253, 254. The spirit of the expression may be rendered here by Well then.

178. εἰ διαστροφῆσομαι, if I shall get a twist; either a twisted neck or a squinting eye. G. § 50, 1, N. 1.

180. πόλος. This word is used in various senses as a scientific term. Here, it has its popular meaning of sky, heavens, vault of the heavens. It is introduced partly for the punning alliteration between πόλος, πόλις, and πολεῖσθαι, in this and the following lines.

181. Ὡςπερ εἶποι. G. § 50, 2, N. 1.

184. G. § 50, 1.

186. παρνόπων, locusts. This refers to them in the character of birds, which would naturally give them dominion over the insects.

187. λιμῶ Μηλίφ. For the particulars of the transaction here alluded to, see Thucydides, Lib. V. 84–116. It took place B. C. 416. See Isocrates, Panegyricus, p. 32 (Fell-ton's edition), and note.

189. ἦν βουλόμεθα. G. § 51.

190. Βοιωτὸν . . . αἰτούμεθα. The principal route from Attica to the northern parts of Greece lay through Boeotia. Without the permission of the Boeotians, the Athenians could not easily consult the oracle of the Pythian Apollo.

193. τοῦ χάους. The word chaos is used here, as in the Clouds several times, in the sense of the air or the sky; properly, the surrounding void; but not in the modern sense of the term chaos. See Clouds, 424, 627.

196, 197. Μὰ . . . πω. Epops, in his ludicrous delight at the proposal and its immense benefits to the race of the birds, breaks into exclamations and oaths which have a comical relation to his position as a bird. Observe the use of the negative μὰ, followed by a sentence which also implies a negative; for which see Kühner, § 317, 4. — νεφέλας, According to a Scholiast, a very light species of net was so called. — Μὴ . . . ἤκουσα. There is something very unusual in the hypothetical negative in this place. The commentators have not generally noticed it, with the exception of Bothe, who says, “Ellipsis verbi ἐξεπλάγην vel cujusdam similis, vereor ut unquam callidius commentum audiverim.” But the meaning, with this construction, would be the opposite to that given by Bothe and required by the sense, — I am afraid lest I have heard (NE audiverim, not UT audiverim); whereas Epops clearly wishes to say, with more or less directness, that he never heard a better scheme. This would seem to require μὴ οὐκ ἤκουσα. G. § 46, N. 5. The grammarians also seem generally to have overlooked the peculiarity of the construction. The editors of the new edition of Passow's Lexicon, however, refer to this and to other similar passages as examples of a rare use of μή in independent sentences containing a protestation or oath; μή in independent sentences being regularly confined to prohibitions and expressions of a wish. The following examples (besides the present one) are cited in Passow, s. v. μή: —

ἴστω νῦν Ζεὺς αὐτός, ἐρίγδουπος πόσις Ἥρης, Μὴ μὲν τοῖς ἵπποισιν ἀνὴρ ἐποιχῆσεται ἄλλος Τρώων, ἀλλὰ σέ φημι διαμπερὲς ἀγλαιεῖσθαι. — Il. X. 330.

*ἴστω νῦν τόδε γαῖα καὶ οὐρανός, . . .
Μὴ δὲ ἐμὴν ἰότητα Ποσειδάων ἐνοσίχθων
Πημαίνει Τρωάς τε καὶ Ἑκτορα.* — Il. XV. 36–42.

Μὰ τὲν Ἀπόλλω μή σ' ἐγὼ κατακλινῶ χαμαί. Aristoph. Lysistr. 917.

Μὰ τὴν Ἀφροδίτην, ἥ μ' ἔλαχε κληρουμένη, μή γ' ὧ σ' ἀφήσω. Aristoph. Eccles. 1000.

It would be difficult to explain all these passages consistently by assuming the ellipsis of a leading verb.

199. Εἰ ξυνδοκοίη . . . ὀρνέοις, If the other birds should agree to it. Note the force of ξύν in composition.

201. βαρβάρους, barbarian; i. e. without articulate speech. The Greeks regarded all who spoke in unknown languages as barbarians, and compared their sounds to the voices of birds. Comp. Aesch. Ag. 974, 975, where Clytaemnestra likens an unknown speech to the twittering of the swallow.

205. τὴν ἐμὴν ἀηδόνα, my (wife) the nightingale. Procne, who was metamorphosed into the nightingale, according to the poets and mythographers.

206. Καλοῦμεν, We will call. The number changes from the singular to the plural, by a construction sufficiently explained by Mtt., Gr. Gr., § 562, 1. The acts expressed by the participles ἐμβάς and ἀνεγείρας are those of Erops alone; but in the subject of καλοῦμεν, Erops is included, together with the nightingale.

207. G. § 50, 1. Cf. v. 189.

215. Ἑλελιζομένη. "Exprimit sonum gementis lusciniae." B. — διερούσι. The Scholiast explains, "Διύργοις ἐκ τῶν δακρύων;" Does it not rather express the general character of the notes of the nightingale? with μέλεσιν, liquid notes, like the Latin liquidæ voces.

227. τοῦ φθίγματος. Genitive of explanation, — What a voice! — referring probably to the music of the flute (αὐλεῖ, i. e. τις), by which the song of the nightingale, according to the statement of the Scholiast, is represented.

229. οὐ σιωπήσει; G. § 25, 1, N. 5 (b).

233. τις. Used indefinitely for many a one, or every one, who is present or within hearing. For this sense, see Mtt. § 487, 2. — ὁμοπτέρων, birds of a feather, of the same feather with myself; my companions or kindred.

239. ἀμφιτιτυβίζεθ', twitter about. It is an imitative word, expressing particularly the twittering of swallows, but also the voices of other birds; λεπτόν qualifies it.

245. Ἀνύσατε πετόμενα. The imperative and the participle of ἀνύω are often constructed with the participle and imperative of other verbs in the adverbial sense of doing quickly what the other verbs signify. Here, fly quickly. For the opposite construction of the participle of ἀνίσω with the imperative of another verb, see G. § 109, N. 8; and Liddell and Scott, s. v. ἀνίσω.

247. ὀξυστόμους. This epithet of the ἐμπίδες is explained by the Scholiast = ὀξυαδούσας, sharply singing; but it is much more natural to refer it, with Bergler, to the sharp proboscis. The insect is found by travellers in Attica as annoying now as it was in the days of Aristophanes. The reader will remember the problem of the singing of the empis, in the Clouds, 157, seq. The bite of the empis is very troublesome and painful, in the beautiful summer nights of Athens. A pair of thick woollen stockings worn over the hands and wrists, I found a good defence. Their singing must be patiently borne. The insect is mentioned several times in Aristotle's Hist. An.

251. Ἀτταγᾶς. Aristotle, Hist. An., IX. 19, alludes to the plumage of this bird, which is probably the moor-hen or hazel-hen. St. John (Hellenes, Vol. II. p. 152) says: "Among the favorite game of the Athenian gourmands was the attagas, or francolin, a little larger than the partridge, variegated with numerous spots, and of common tile color, somewhat inclining to red. It is said to have been introduced from Lydia into Greece, and was found in extraordinary abundance in the Megaris." See also note to the place, with references to the authorities for various opinions.

257. ἤκει, as Perfect. G. § 10, 1, N. 4. — δριμύς, sharp, crafty. It is used in a comic sense.

267, 268. ἄρ' . . . μιμούμενος. The particle is slightly inferential, — then; i. e. since I have been gaping up into the sky, and can see none. The charadrios is mentioned by Aristotle several times. It appears to have been a species of plover called the gold plover. The voice of the bird is harsh and disagreeable, and perhaps the imitating mentioned by Euelpides is a back-handed compliment to the singing of Epops; this is also supported by the word ἐπῳζε, which does not describe a melodious sound.

270. ἀλλὰ . . . ἔρχεται. The accumulation of particles is expressive of the comic astonishment of Peisthetairos at the flaming appearance of the bird just arrived, — Sure enough, here is a bird coming now! But the phoenicopteros excited astonishment not only by his brilliant plumage. He was a rare bird, hardly ever seen in the latitude of Greece. “Fuit inter rarissimas Athenis aves.” Bothe. Von der Mühle (in his monograph, cited above, upon the birds of Greece, p. 118) states that he was unable to learn anything of the existence of the phoenicopteros in Greece, but thought it impossible the bird should be wanting there, since it was found on the Adriatic coast, in Asia Minor, on the Caspian Sea, and on the Wolga, between which regions Greece is situated. He adds, that he saw some which were brought from Smyrna. This passage in Aristophanes shows that the above-mentioned writer was correct in including the phoenicopteros among the birds of Greece. Heliodorus (Aethiopica, Lib. VI. c. 3) introduces one of the personages in the story carrying, by command of Isias, his mistress, a phoenicopteros of the Nile (ἔργον τινὰ τοῦτον, ὡς ὀρᾶς, Νειλῶν φαινικόπτερον).

271. οὐ . . . ταῶς; It is not surely a peacock? The whole tone of the dialogue shows how unusual a sight the bird was to the Athenians; and the reply of Epops is in the spirit of one who is determined to make the most of a great curiosity.

272. οὗτος αὐτός, i. e. Epops, this one himself; pointing to the bird.

274. λιμναῖος. Applied to birds, this epithet signifies, not water-fowl, as it is incorrectly translated by Liddell and Scott, and generally in the versions, but those birds which haunt the water's edge and are known by the generic name of waders.

274, 275. φοινικιοῦς φοινικόπτερος. The pun here may be preserved by rendering φοινικόπτερος flamingo, the name of the family to which he belongs:—How handsome and flaming, — naturally, for his name is flamingo.

276. σέ τοι. Constructed with καλῶ, or some such word, to be supplied.

277, 278. Νῆ ὀριβάτης; The first line is said, by the Scholiast, to be a parody on Sophocles (the beginning of the Tyro), and the second from a passage in Aeschylus. The Μῆδος is the same as the Περσικὸς ὄρνις in v. 485. — ἔξεδρον χώραν ἔχων, a bird from foreign parts. — μουσόμεντις. “Ὁ κομπώδης· τοιοῦτοι γὰρ οἱ μάντις καὶ οἱ ποιηταί.” Sch. The description, originally applied to a character in Aeschylus, is here transferred to the strutting cock.

280. ἀνευ καμήλου. The Scholiast says: “Ὡς τῶν Μήδων ὡς ἐπὶ τὸ πολὺ ἐπὶ καμήλων ὀχουμένων ἐπὶ τῇ τῶν πολέμων ἐξόδῳ.” — εἰσέπτατο, flew in.

281. Ἐτερος οὔτοσί. The pun here turns upon the military meaning of λόφον κατεληφώς, having occupied a hill; and here, having got a crest. See note to v. 295.

283–285. Ἄλλ' Καλλίας. In answer to the question of Peisthetairos, whether there is another Epops, — the question being put in a tone of some surprise, — the poet takes occasion to make a hit at several persons. Philocles, the poet, who imitated Sophocles in his play of Tereus, has already been mentioned. Epops means to say that the present bird is not the genuine Epops, but only an imitation, like that in Philocles; and as he himself is, as it were, the father of the Epops in Sophocles, so he may be said to be, in the same way, the grandfather of this one. And this suggests the Athenian mode of naming children, upon which

St. John (Ancient Greeks, Vol. I. p. 131) says: "The right of imposing the name belonged, as hinted above, to the father, who likewise appears to have possessed the power afterwards to alter it, if he thought proper. They were compelled to follow no exact precedent; but the general rule resembled one apparently observed by nature, which, neglecting the likeness in the first generation, sometimes reproduces it with extraordinary fidelity in the second. Thus the grandson, inheriting often the features, inherited also very generally the name of his grandfather; and precisely the same rule applied to women, the granddaughter nearly always receiving her grandmother's name. Thus Andocides, son of Leagoras, bore the name of his grandfather; the father and son of Miltiades were named Cimon; the father and son of Hipponicos, Callias." These particular names are probably selected by the poet, not only because the family to whom they belong present a remarkable instance of this customary alternation through many generations, but because the last Callias, the individual especially alluded to, was notorious for his prodigality and profligacy, and ruined the fortunes of the family. The first Hipponicos known to Athenian history was a contemporary of Solon, about six hundred years before Christ; and the last Callias, the third of the name, flourished about two hundred years later. He held in the course of his life many high offices in the state, in spite of his folly and profligacy, which early fastened upon him the name of the ἀλιτήριος,* or evil genius of his family. His portrait is drawn by Andocides in very forbidding colors.* Plato also gives some traits of his character. See the Protagoras, the scene of which is laid at the house of Callias; and the Apology (p. 20 A), where Callias is spoken of as ἀνδρί, δε τετέλεκε χρήματα σοφισταῖς πλείω ἢ ξύμπαντες οἱ ἄλλοι. He is said to have been reduced to great destitution, and finally to have died a beggar. The particulars of the history, and all the important facts respecting their wealth, have been carefully collected by Boeckh (Public Economy of the Athenians, Book IV. Chap. 3). See also Xenophon's Hellenica, IV. 5, 13; Aristotle's Rhet. III. 2. In many respects the family was one of the most famous, as well as one of the oldest, in Athens. — ὥσπερ εἰ. We might have had ὥσπερ ἂν εἰ. G. § 53, N. 3.

286. πτεροῖν ἐν, he is moulting; and in this respect resembles Callias, or is a Callias. The next two lines continue the allusions in the same vein.

287, 288. Ἄτε πτερά. The sycophants at Athens were the pest of society. No age or character or public services shielded a man of wealth from their attacks. Aristophanes holds them up to ridicule and reprobation in several of his pieces, and the other comic writers lost no opportunity of exposing their practices. They figure largely in the remains of the Attic orators. On account of his noble birth, his high rank, and his wealth, Callias was an inviting object to these miscreants, and his vices facilitated the success of their machinations. — θήλειαι. The allusion here is to the licentiousness which notoriously marked the life of Callias (see above). — For ἄτε ὧν, see G. § 109, N. 3 (a).

In the following passage, all the birds which constitute the chorus make their appearance. Many of them it is not possible to identify with existing species. Catophagas, for instance, the glutton, is said not to have been the specific name of any bird at all, though that does not seem quite probable. The Cleonymos, to whom this bird is compared, is the one mentioned in a similar way in the Clouds (see

v. 353 and note) as a shield-dropper, and elsewhere as a coward and sensualist. It is in reference to the former that Euelpides asks why he did not cast off his crest (v. 292).

292. $\alpha\upsilon$ = $\epsilon\iota$ $\eta\nu$. G. § 109, 6; § 52, 1.

293, 294. ἄλλα . . . ἦλθον; Peisthetairos wonders at the crests of the birds, and immediately calls to mind the practice fashionable among the young Athenians of entering the δίαυλος, or double course, armed with crested helmets. A great variety of races were run over the δίαυλος. The armed races, of which that alluded to by Aristophanes in this place was one, formed a part of several panegyrical festivities. For a full account of them, see Krause, Gymnastik und Agonistik der Hellenen, pp. 777, seq. In a note to that work (p. 905), the author remarks that the armed race appears but seldom on the antique monuments of art. There is one beautiful representation of it found in the Berlin collection of vases, of which the following is in part a description. "On the inner side appears a runner, taking vigorous strides, having a large round shield in his left hand; the right is in violent motion, as are both hands of the runners in other works of art; the head is covered with a helmet. On the shield is a racer figured in the same manner, except that he holds the shield in his right hand," &c. See also the plate, Tab. VII. b, Fig. 14, b, c, d, of the same work.

294, 295. Ὡσπερ οἱ Κάρες . . . οἰκοῦσιν. "Ἡ ὅτι ἐν πέτραις ᾤκουν ὑπὲρ ἀσφαλείας, ἥ ὅτι λόφον ἔχουσιν ἐπὶ τῶν κρανῶν." Schol. The pun here, as in v. 281, turns upon the double meaning of λόφος, a hill, or a crest. The Carians are said to have been the first to use the crest; whence Alcaeus, λόφον τε σείων Καρικόν. (Strab. XIV. p. 661.) Strabo and Herodotus (I. 171) attribute to them two other inventions, that of devices on shields (σημεῖα, ἐπίσημα), and that of handles (ῥάνα) to shields. The question whether the Carians originated on the continent of Asia or on the islands of the Aegaeon was disputed in antiquity; the Carians maintaining the former, and the Cretans and most others the latter. (Herod. I. 171.) But the ancient authorities are hopelessly confused and inconsistent: Herodotus, who gives what he calls the Cretan version, disagrees entirely with Thucydides (I. 4); and both disagree with Strabo (XIV. p. 661), who gives what he calls the most current version (ὁ μάλισθ' ὁμολογούμενος). Diodorus Siculus and Pausanias, on the other hand, seem to have followed the Carian account: they disagree, of course, entirely with the former authorities, and they are not perfectly consistent with each other. (See Diod. V. 84 and 53; Pausan. VII. 2-4; Conon. Narrat. 47.) In the historic times, we find the Carians only on the Continent; and in their various wars with the Persians and the Greeks, they seem to have been famous for eluding their enemies by occupying the hills (λόφοι) of their mountainous country, and for harassing invaders who ventured into the interior. See Thucyd. III. 19, who says (speaking of an attempt made by Lysikles with an Athenian army to collect money in this region in 418 B. C.): Καὶ τῆς Καρίας ἐκ Μουσώντος ἀναβάς διὰ τοῦ Μαιάνδρου πεδίου μέχρι τοῦ Σανδίου λόφου, ἐπιθεμένων τῶν Καρῶν καὶ Ἀναιτῶν αὐτὸς τε διαφθείρεται καὶ τῆς ἄλλης στρατιᾶς πολλοί. In fact, the Athenians appear to have never been masters of more than the coast of Caria, if we may judge from the mention of Καρία ἢ ἐπὶ θαλάσση among their tributaries at the beginning of the Peloponnesian war. (See Thucyd. II. 9.)

296, 297. ὅσον . . . ὀρνέων; Of the use of κακόν here Bothe says it is "comice dictum pro πλῆθος"; i. e. instead of saying how great a multitude of birds, he says how great an evil of birds,—equivalent to some such expression as What a pothor of birds! What a plaguy lot of birds!

298. τὴν εἴσοδον, the entrance; i. e. through which the personages of the chorus entered the orchestra. See Clouds, 326, and note, pp. 136, 137.

299, seqq. Peisthetairos now points out, one after the other, the twenty-four birds who constitute the chorus proper, each of course appropriately represented by the comic masks, expressly prepared for them. On this passage, Bode (Geschichte der Hellenischen Dichtkunst, B. III. Th. II. pp. 283, 284) says: "The chorus of the birds, perhaps the most comical ever introduced by Aristophanes, comes in, after the call of the Hoopoo, in the sporadic manner (Different birds at first appear, one after another, at the arched entrance of the orchestra, and after they have passed one by one across the orchestra they disappear. They form, as it were, the van of the proper chorus. First comes running in a flamingo, with outspread purple wings; then struts in a cock; then trips along a hoopoo, somewhat plucked; then waddles through the orchestra a bright-colored gullet, with grotesque mimicry. They are all four precisely designated. The proper chorus, then, of twenty-four, press through the entrance of strangers in compact groups of many colors, so that the passage is scarcely visible for their fluttering. They are likened to clouds. Even around the Thymele they seem to be gathering in groups, and, with their beaks wide open, to be peering upon the stage.) By degrees they then divide themselves into Hemichoria, so that, according to the grammarians, twelve male birds of different species take their position on one side of the Thymele, and twelve females on the other. The males are the cock-partridge, the hazel-cock, the duck, the kingfisher, the tufted lark, the horned owl, the heron, the falcon, the cuckoo, the red-foot, the hawk, and the woodpecker; the females are, the halcyon (which with the keirylos or kingfisher forms the only pair), then the night-owl, jay, turtle-dove, falcon, the pigeon, the ring-dove, the brant-geese, the purple-cap, diver, ousel, osprey. As here the gentle doves appear along with the fiercest birds of prey, so the males, mentioned above separately, enter, in the actual Parodos of Aristophanes, mingled up with the females. In irregular haste, they run pipping and chattering towards the stage, so that Euelpides, full of astonishment, exclaims:—

Ἴου ἰοῦ τῶν ὀρνέων,

Ἴου ἰοῦ τῶν κοψίχων.

Οἷα πιπίζουσι καὶ τρέχουσι διακεκραγότες.

A manifest proof that the Parodos was sporadic."

The male birds, according to this arrangement, are περδιξ, ἀτταγᾶς, πενέλοψ, κηρύλος, κορυδός, ἐλεᾶς, νέρτος, ιέραξ, κόκκυξ, ἱρυθρόπους, κερχυῆς, δρύοψ; the females, ἀλκυών, γλαύξ, κίττα, τρυγών, ὑποθυμῖς, περιστερά, φάττα, κεβλήπυρις, πορφυρίς, κολυμβίς, ἀμπελῖς, φήνη.

303. Τίς γλαῦκ' Ἀθήναξ ἤγαγε; The Scholiast says: Παροιμία ἐπὶ τῶν μάτην ἐπισωρευόντων τινὰ ἐπὶ τοῖς προϋπάρχουσιν οἷον εἴ τις ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ σῖτον ἐπαγάγοι, ἢ ἐν Κιλικίᾳ κρόκον. So in English, to carry coals to Newcastle. The poet alludes also to the owl upon the Attic coins, whence the expression γλαῦκες Δαυριωτικαί. See v. 1099, and note.

308. τῶν κοψίχων. Genitive of exclamation. This bird is singled out in the exclamation on account of its clamorous chattering.

312. Ποποποποποποποῦ. The chirping of the birds is intended to be expressed by this stammering pronunciation; and so in the next line but one.

313. πάλαι πάρεμι. G. § 10, 1, N. 3.

316. λεπτῶ λογιστά, two acute reasoners. There is also a reference to the board of λογισταί at Athens, to whom the magistrates on leaving office must render their accounts. On the duties of the λογισταί and their relations to the similar board of εὔθυνοι, see Boeckh's Public Economy of the Athenians, Book II. Chap. 8; Hermann's Political Antiquities of Greece, § 154; Schömann's Assemblies of the Athenians, p. 279.

317. Ποῦ; The questions of the chorus, and indeed the whole tone of the dialogue, will remind the reader of the opening scenes in the Oedipus at Colonus of Sophocles. Perhaps the poet intended a slight raillery upon the somewhat melodramatic mannerism of the tragic choruses on their first appearance in a piece, of which that of the Oedipus at Colonus was a specimen.

319. Ἦκετον πελωρίου. A comic imitation of tragic pomp of expression. — πρέμνον, the bottom, or the root.

320. ὦ ἐξαμαρτών. Observe the construction of the participle after an exclamation, — O thou who hast done wrong! — ἐτράφην. Bothe says: “Dixit significanter et ridicule, quia vita avium et animantium nihil aliud esse videtur quam nutritus.” The word, however, is applied in the same way where no ridicule is to be supposed.

321. φοβηθῆς. The aorist with the prohibitive negative μή limits the act to the single case. G. § 86.

322. τῇσδε ξυνουσίας, this society here; the society of the birds.

323. γ' has an emphasizing force.

326. Προεδεδόμεθ' ἐπάθομεν. Observe the interchange of the tenses, passing in the same construction from the perfect to the aorist, according as the act or state is to be more or less precisely limited.

329. θεσμούς ἀρχαίους. The Scholiast says: “Ὡς τούτου νενομοθετημένου αὐτοῖς τὸ μὴ συνεῖναι ἀνθρώποις.” Θεσμοί seems to have been an older expression than νόμοι, hence it is generally applied to the laws of Draco: even these, however, are sometimes called νόμοι. The chorus give a mock gravity to their charge against Epops by employing a word associated with the ancient traditions of the Athenian legislature.

334. τοῦτον, this one; i. e. Epops.

335. δοῦναι. The aorist infinitive here refers to the future, and not to the past; as δοκεῖ μοι means it pleases me, and not it seems to me. See G. § 23, 2, N. 4. (Compare Clouds, v. 1141; and G. § 23, 2, N. 3.)

336. ἄρα, therefore; expressing the logical inference from the threatening language of the birds. We are dead men, then.

338. ἐκεῖθεν, thence; i. e. from Athens. — ἀκολουθοίης. The present here implies, not the single act of following from Athens, but the permanent condition of an attendant.

339. κλάοιμι. The idiomatic use of this specific word, in a general sense, gives occasion to the joke in the next line. — ληρεῖς ἔχων. See G. § 109, N. 8.

340. τῷφθαλμῷ ἔκκοπῃς. The accusative construction here is the same as in the Clouds, 24: ἐξέκοπή τὸν ὀφθαλμόν.

342. Ἐπαγ', &c. Expressions borrowed from military language in drawing out an army for attack.

345, 346. οἰμῶζειν, δοῦναι. Observe the change of tense in the infinitives; the present indicating the continued or repeated act, the aorist limiting the signification to the single thing. The groaning is naturally continuous and repeated; the giving food to the beak is viewed as a single and finished transaction.

351. Ποῦ κέρας. The taxiarchs, in the military system of the Athenians, were of the next grade to the στρατηγοί, being ten in number, one for each tribe. Each tribe furnished a τάξις of infantry, and the τάξεις were severally under the command of these officers; the right wing — τὸ δεξιὸν κέρας — was the post of honor in battle (see Herod. VI. 111), and as such originally it was the right of the polemarch to hold it. For the general discussion of the subject, see Schömann, Antiquitatis Juris Publici Graecorum, pp. 251–256. — ποῦ φύγω; G. § 88.

353. γάρ implies an answer to the previous question; here, yes, for how, &c. — For ἂν ἐκφυγεῖν, see G. § 42, 2, Note; § 41, 3; § 73, 1.

354. ἄ qualifies some word to be mentally supplied, — I don't know how I can escape.

355. λαμβάνειν χυτῶν, to take hold of the pots. Genitive of the thing laid hold of.

356. Γλαῖξ. The owl, Peisthetairos thinks, will not attack them, because it is, like them, Athenian.

357. Τοῖς. The dative is to be constructed with an expression to be supplied, — What shall we protect ourselves with against these crooked claws?

358. πρὸς αὐτόν. The reading and interpretation are uncertain here. Bothe says: "Veru arrepto alites illos confige, quemadmodum πηγνύναι τι ἐπὶ κορυφῇ et similia dicuntur." And the Scholiast, cited by Bothe, gives an explanation which seems to imply the reading αὐτῇ, instead of αὐτόν, viz. Seize the spit and fix it by the pot, to make as it were a palisade. Taking the present reading, it may be translated, Take the spit and fix it near yourself. This agrees substantially with the interpretation of Blaydes, who adopts the reading πρὸ σαντοῦ: Sibi ut hastam prætendere. I think the explanation of Bothe and the translation of Cary — "Take a spit and have at them" — are scarcely consistent with the connection. The old men are not meditating an assault; they are taking measures of defence, and their engines consist of the pots, the spits, and a few other articles which they packed up and brought away with them from Athens. With these they prepare to make the stoutest defence they can; but they scarcely think of offensive measures. — ὀφθαλμοῖσι, and for our eyes, what? i. e. what shall we do for the protection of our eyes? Construction, dative of indirect object.

359. Ὀξύβαφον, vinegar-cup. "Among the various ways in which the Greeks and Romans made use of vinegar in their cookery and at their meals, it appears that it was customary to have upon the table a cup containing vinegar, into which the guests might dip their bread, lettuce, fish, or other viands before eating them." See Smith's Dict. of Gr. and Rom. Antiq., Art. Acetabulum, where there is a figure of the cup. See also Athenaeus, II. p. 67 : "τὸ δεχόμενον αὐτὸ (i. e. τὸ ὄξος) ἀγγεῖον ὀξύβαφον." The vinegar-cup was to be used as a sort of shield for the eyes.

360, 361. ὦ . . . μηχαναῖς. Aristophanes never loses an opportunity to make a jest at the expense of Nicias. According to Thucydides (Lib. III. c. 51) Nicias was sent against the island of Minoa, near Megara, to cut off the Peloponnesians from the use of this port. He accomplished the object by the skilful application of military engines. In the siege of Melos he is said also to have resorted to similar measures. He thus became famous more for this species of strategy than for boldness of conduct in the field. — Ὑπερακοντίζεις, you overshoot, surpass; by the same figure of speech which we constantly use in English.

362. Ἐλελεεὺ . . . ἐχρῆν. The first word the Scholiast calls ἐπίφθεγμα πολεμικόν, a warlike shout. — κάθες, lower or present beak; i. e. like a spear. — οὐ μένειν ἐχρῆν. G. § 49, 2, N. 3.

366. τῆς γυναικός, i. e. Procne, or the nightingale, daughter of the mythical Pandion, king of Athens. — φυλῆτα, tribesmen. The division of the Athenians into tribes, phratriæ, and gentes is familiar to all. It was common to designate individuals by words expressive of their relations, both for the purpose of identification, and because the rights of citizenship were legally certified to by the registers.

367. λύκων. According to Petit, there was an ancient law providing for the killing of wolves; much like modern laws in new countries, offering bounties for scalps and skins of wild beasts, and sometimes of men. St. John (Vol. I. p. 227) says: "The wolf, though a sacred animal in Attica, had by the laws a price set upon his head, at which Menage wonders, though the Egyptians also slaughtered their sacred crocodiles when they exceeded a certain size."

370. διδάξοντες. Future expressing purpose. G. § 109, 5.

372. πάπποις, grandfathers. For the sake of comic effect, put for ancestors in general, as in serious discourse fathers is used. — φράσειαν (sc. δν). G. § 42, 4.

373–378. 'Αλλ' . . . χρήματα. Epops, like a wise bird, quotes the maxims of the philosophers. "Fas est et ab hoste doceri," is the Latin commonplace to the same point. — γάρ introduces the general reflection, which contains the justification of the previous remark, in the abstract; and then the principle involved is shown practically by the instances. — ἐξηγάκασεν. For the idiomatic use of the aorist, see Clouds, 520, note, in the new edition. G. § 30, 1. — Αὐτίχ', for example. See v. 167. — Ἐκπονείν. "Exempla sunt ex historia Atheniensium petita, apud quos, Xerxe fugato, Themistocles effecit, ut urbs muris cingeretur, aedificaretur Peiraeus, et quotannis viginti triremes construerentur." Bothe. — ναῦς μακράς, naves longas; i. e. ships of war. — μάθημα τοῦτο, this lesson.

379. ἀκούσαι. The aorist infinitive is properly used here on account of the action intended to be expressed being a single one, i. e. limited to the hearing in the present case.

381. χαλᾶν, to be yielding, the proper meaning of the present infinitive. — Ἀναγ' ἐπὶ σκέλος = ἐπὶ πόδα, retreat, fall back.

385. καθίει, lower; there being no longer any need of such defences.

386. ὀβελίσκον. In apposition with δόρυ.

388. ὅπλων ἐντός, within the arms; i. e. the pot and the bowls, being placed on the ground, form as it were a camp, within the line of which Peisthetairos deems it expedient that they should still keep themselves. This he thinks will be a sufficient security, provided they still keep a sharp eye.

upon the troops of the birds by watching over the edge of the pot.

390. οὐ φευκτίον νῆν. G. § 114, 2.

391. ἦν δ' ἄρ', and if then. ἄρα here is a slightly inferential particle. If then, i. e. in consequence of what you propose.

393. Κεραμεικός. Those who fell in battle were buried with public honors, and at the public expense, in the burying-ground called the Κεραμεικός, without the city. It was customary to appoint some distinguished citizen to pronounce a eulogy. The well-known example of the discourse pronounced by Pericles, on the Athenians who fell in the first campaign of the Peloponnesian war, will occur to the reader. See Thucydides, Lib. II. cc. 34–46, where all the ceremonies are carefully described.

395. πρὸς τοὺς στρατηγούς. For the general duties of the board of generals (ten in number), see Schömann, Griech. Alterthümer, I. 422; Hermann, Pol. Antiq., §§ 152, 153. Besides the civil and military duties there enumerated, it belonged to them to make and superintend the arrangements for the public burials. The reader will remember Xenophon's account of the trial of the generals after the battle of Arginousae, on the charge of neglecting to bury those who had perished in the engagement, and of leaving those who remained upon the wrecks to perish. See Hellenica, Lib. I. c. 7. See also Grote, Vol. VIII. Chap. 64.

397. Ὀρνεαῖς, at Orneae. The jest turns upon the name of an ancient town in Argolis, which had suffered in the Peloponnesian war (Bird-town). See v. 13, and note. The name is mentioned by Homer, Il. II. 571.—ἀποθανεῖν. G. § 23, 2.

398–400. Ἄναγ' . . . ὀπλίτης. The language is a parody upon the terms of military command: Ἄναγ' εἰς τάξιν, fall back in line; τὸν θυμὸν κατάθου, lay down your wrath, instead of spear ; Παρὰ τὴν ὀργήν, beside your anger, instead of shield.

403. Ἐπὶ τίνα τ' ἐπίνοιαν, And for what purpose, or on what scheme ?

405. τοῦ = τίτος.

412. Σοῦ. "Tui ipsius, non solum tuæ, i. e. avium, vitæ sub dio et in silvis campisque, quemadmodum vivunt etiam venatores, pastores, milites ; sed hi senes Athenienses ipsarum avium commercium et societatem expetunt." Bothe.

416. Ἄπιστα . . . κλύειν, Incredible, and more, to hear : περὰ τῶν ἀπίστων. The infinitive depends on ἀπιστα, and not on πέρα, as the Scholiast constructs it.

417. Ὅρᾱ. Although the two have been spoken of before, the chorus here uses the singular, referring to one only of the old Athenians.

419. Κρατεῖν . . . ἐχθρόν. Κρατεῖν with the accusative means to conquer by force ; with the genitive, to be master of. — Κρατεῖν ἄν represents κρατοίῃ ἄν, and ἔχειν (sc. ἄν) represents ἔχοι ἄν, of the direct discourse. G. § 73, 1 ; § 41, 1.

421, 422. Λέγει . . . οὔτε λεκτόν. Observe the comic exaggeration, running into something not unlike an Irish bull.

429, 430. For a similar series of words implying all kinds of craft and roguery, see Clouds, 260, and note.

433. ἀνεπτέρωμαι. The Scholiast says : "Οἰκείον ὄρνισι τὸ ἀνεπτέρωμαι, οἶον μετεώρισμαι."

435, 436. κρεμάσαστον . . . τοῦπιστάτου. Bothe says : "Haec ex communi Atheniensium vita sunt explicanda, qui finito bello arma suspendere solebant ad furnum vel caminum." The Scholiast describes the ἐπιστάτης as a χαλκοῦς τρίπους, χυτρόποδος ἐκτελῶν χρεῖαν ; and he adds : "Οἱ δέ, πῆλινον Ἥφαιστον πρὸς τὰς ἐστίας ἰδρυμένον, ὡς ἔφορον τοῦ πυρός, ἔνιοι δὲ καὶ ξύλον ἐπίμηκες πεπασσαλωμένον, ὅθεν ἐξαρτῶσι τὰ μαγειρικά σκεύη." It seems plain, from the kind of armor with which the Athenians had equipped themselves, that these allusions to the kitchen are not wholly to be explained by the usages of common life. The expressions contain rather jocose references to the pots, the bowls, and the skewers which constituted their luggage and means of defence. The ἰπνός is the chimney, but here put for the fire-place or oven, or perhaps it may be called the chimney-place; as the Scholiast says: “Ἰπνὸς μὲν ὁ κάμινος, καταχρηστικῶς δὲ ἡ ἐσχάρα.” Of the ἐπιστάτης, Boeckh, Corpus Inscriptionum, Vol. I. p. 20, says: “Idem Attici, eodem sensu [i. e. the same with ὑποστάτω and ὑποστάτη] ἐπίστατον sive ἐπιστάτην, dixerint. . . . Aristophanes, Av. 436, rem conficit, licet ibi, quid sit ὁ ἐπιστάτης, sive τὸ ἐπίστατον dubitetur. Tria enim Scholiastae proponunt, Vulcanum ex luto fictum, qui quasi Lar familiaris sit: . . . trabem vel asserem ad caminum, unde ex clavis vasa culinaria suspendantur; . . . postremo basin sive tripodem, in quo ollae et lebetes igni apponantur.” He prefers the last, remarking: “Nihil enim in illo loco hac significatione aptius: nam Upupa jubet arma suspendi εἰς τὸν ἰπνὸν εἶσω πλησίον τοῦ ἐπιστάτου, hoc est in camino, non prope trabem, ex qua suspendentur vasa, sed in ipsa trabe, prope tripodem ibidem suspensum, ut etiam nunc mulierculae tripodes ibi suspendunt.”

439, 441. *Ἦν . . . ἐμέ. The person here designated as the monkey sword-maker is said to have been one Panaetius, who, according to the Scholiast, was also satirized in the piece called The Islands. The Scholiast adds: “Μικροφυῆς ἦν· διαβάλλει δὲ αὐτὸν ὡς καταλαβόντα τὴν γυναῖκα ἑαυτοῦ μοιχευομένην· ἐδυναστεύετο γὰρ ὑπ’ αὐτῆς μεγάλης οὐσης μικροφυῆς αὐτὸς ὢν.” “Duxerat uxorem, cum qua quum saepius rixaretur, tandem convenit, ut se invicem nec morderent, nec plagis afficerent.” Bothe.

443. Τόν; The broken sentence, according to the Scholiast, is to be filled out by a gesture, — You don't mean thé — No, surely:—striking the part of the body alluded to, πρωτόν δεικνὺς φησιν ὅτι πον. “Videtur ipse Panaetius adultero adulterorum poenam dedisse ῥαφανδώσεως, eodemque modo ne iterum plecteretur cavisse.” Bothe.

445–447. Ὁμνυμὶ . . . μόνον. The allusion here is to the mode of deciding in competitions for the dramatic prize. In tragic representations, the number of judges appointed was ten, one for each tribe. It seems that, in the contests of the comedians, only five were called upon to judge. See Bode, Gesch. d. Hellen. Dichtkunst, III. pp. 147, 148. See also Schneider, Das Attische Theaterwesen, pp. 169–174. Πᾶσι τοῖς κριταῖς νικᾶν signifies, “to gain the dramatic victory by a unanimous vote of the judges,” and ἐνὶ κριτῇ νικᾶν μόνον is “to gain the victory by only one vote”; giving a turn to his expression from what might naturally have been expected, namely, to be conquered, to a mere diminution of the number of voices, being victorious still. — Ἐπὶ τούτοις, on these terms. — εἰ παραβαίῃν. G. § 54, 2 (a).

448–450. G. § 103. The herald now, in solemn form, proclaims the truce, and orders the heavy-armed to depart to their several homes. This appears to have been the customary rite on the conclusion of a treaty of peace. It is here applied in the spirit of parody.

450. προγράφωμεν . . . πινακίοις. G. § 61, 3. This refers to the mode of giving notice of the subjects to be discussed in a political assembly, namely, by exposing in public places, streets, and squares tablets fastened on columns, with the matters inscribed upon which the assembly was summoned to debate.

453. τάχα γὰρ τύχοις ἂν ἐξείπων, for perhaps you might chance to speak of (not, to have spoken). G. § 112, 2; for the Aorist Participle, § 24, N. 1.

454. μοι παροῦς, you see in me, or in my case.

458. ὁ γὰρ ἂν τύχῃς. G. § 61, 3. See note on v. 453.

461. ὡς οὐ μὴ παραβῶμεν. G. § 89, 1, with N. 1.

462, 463. προπεφύραται, διαμάττειν. The language is borrowed from the baker's art; both words, however, are translated in the lexicons as if they were nearly synonymous, and as if both meant to knead. But they probably refer to different stages in the process of bread-making. The first obviously describes the putting together of the materials, and mixing them up; the second, the careful and elaborate kneading of the dough. For a curious account of the whole matter, see St. John, Vol. III. pp. 109, seq. It may be added, that Athenian bakers had a high reputation; for, as St. John says (l. c.), "The bread sold in the marketplace of Athens was esteemed the whitest and most delicious in Greece; for the Rhodians, speaking partially of the produce of their own ovens, supposed they were bestowing on it the highest compliment when they said it was not inferior to that of Athens." It was, therefore, quite natural for the old Athenian, in announcing his excellent schemes, to borrow a figure from the bakehouse. — οὐ κωλύει. The doubts of Dindorf and the suggestion of a various reading by Bothe are unnecessary here. κωλύει is used impersonally, hinders not. The same usage occurs in Thucydides, Lib. I. c. 144: "Οὐτε γὰρ ἐκείνο κωλύει ἐν ταῖς σπονδαῖς οὐτε τόδε, — For in the truce there hinders not (there is no hindrance to) either that or this." See note on the passage in Owen's Thucydides, p. 432. For the various constructions with the Infinitive allowed after οὐ κωλύει, see G. § 95, 2, with N. 1; and § 95, 3. — στέφανον. It was customary to wear a chaplet at feasts, and before reclining at the table to have water poured over the hands. For the particulars, see Becker's Charicles, Excursus to Scene VI.

465. λαρινὸν ἔπος, a fat word. The epithet is suggested by the allusions to feasting.

466. ὅ τι θραΐσει. G. § 65, 1.

467. βασιλῆς. The speech of Peisthetairos is here interrupted by the chorus, who, astonished to hear of their former dignity, cannot wait until the sentence is completed.

471. πολυπράγμων. This generally is used in a bad sense, — a busy-body, — but here only knowing many things; observant and experienced in many things. — πεπάτηκας. The fables of Aesop, in some form, were as familiar to the Athenians of Aristophanes's age as similar compositions are to the children of modern times. What they were precisely, and whether they were written or not, are questions among the learned; but it is certain that the current jests, drolleries, and odd stories at Athens were generally palmed upon the old fabulist. Aristophanes has several other allusions to him; Socrates versified some of his apologues, and, afterwards, Demetrius Phalereus; but none of these metrical essays are preserved. At a much later period, Babrius versified them in choliambics. Some of these are extant, and have high merit. But the collections of prose fables now in existence under the name of Aesop were proved by Bentley to be forgeries; and no person at all accustomed to discriminate between the styles of different ages in Greek literature can doubt the justness of his decision. The phrase used in the cited line, you have not trodden, is a comic equivalent to you are not familiar with; perhaps selected here in allusion to the birds, who would be obliged to use their claws in the place of hands, for holding a book. The same expression is cited by Blaydes, from Plato's Phaedo: “Ἀλλὰ μὴν τὸν γε Τιτίαν πεπάτηκας ἀκριβῶς.”

473, 474. ἀποθήσκειν and προκείσθαι are in the Imperfect Infinitive, representing the Imperfect Indicative of the direct discourse; as γενέσθαι (v. 472) and κατορύξαι (v. 475) represent the Aorist. G. § 15, 3; § 23, 2; § 73, 1.—

προκείμεναι πεμπτῆιον, was lying out for the fifth day. In Greece, the body of the dead, after having been washed and anointed, was laid out in the vestibule of the house, with the feet towards the door, as a symbolical intimation that it was about to take its last journey.

476. Κεφαλῆσιν. A pun on Κεφαλαί, the name of one of the δῆμοι of the tribe Acamantis. Κατορύξαι. "Ἐπεὶ λόφον ἔχει ἡ κορυθός." Schol.

478. Ὡς . . . ὄντων. For ὥς with a causal Participle, see G. § 109, N. 4.

480. δρυκόλαπτη. The reason why Zeus would be slow to restore the sceptre to this bird is, that the oak is sacred to him.

481. ἦρχον, were rulers. G. § 19, Notes 1 and 2.

484. Darius and Megabazos are named here as representing the Persians, because their names were notorious from their connection with the first Persian invasion of Greece. See Herod., V.

487. κυρβασίαν . . . ὀρθήν. "Reges Persarum gestabant, etiam serioribus temporibus, tiamam rectam, ut ceteri Persae retro flexam . . . atque ea ὀρθή τιάρᾳ dicebatur proprie κυρβασία." Bothe. This upright head-dress of the Persian monarchs may be seen in the mosaic of the battle of Issus, found in one of the houses of Pompeii, and engraved in most of the works upon the ruins of that city. See particularly the German work, Herculaneum und Pompeii, Vol. IV. pl. 3.

489. ὁπότεν ὄρθριον ᾄσῃ, whenever he sings his morning song. G. § 62. With ὄρθριον understand νόμον, song: Porson indeed reads (by conjecture) ὁπότεν νόμον ὄρθριον ᾄσῃ. So Meineke. For an account of the handicrafts enumerated in the following lines, and for a valuable summary of Athenian industry in general, see St. John, Vol. III. pp. 96-214.

492. ὑποδησάμενοι. This word originally described the tying on of the simple sandal, such as is seen in many ancient statues. But in the progress of luxury, a great variety of shoes and boots, some richly adorned (see Hope's Costumes), came into use, and the same word was still employed to describe the act of putting them on, though its etymological signification was partly lost sight of. See St. John, Vol. II. pp. 64, seq.

493. Φρυγίων ἐρίων. The fine wool of Phrygia is mentioned among the exports of that country. The Phrygian dyers were particularly skilful in the practice of the art of coloring wool.

494. δεκάτην. Upon this word it is worth while to read the following passage: "While the poor, as we have seen, were driven by despair to imbrue their hands in the blood of their offspring, their more wealthy neighbors celebrated the birth of a child with a succession of banquets and rejoicings. Of these, the first was held on the fifth day from the birth, when took place the ceremony called Amphidromia, confounded by some ancient authors with the festival of the tenth day. On this occasion the accoucheuse, or the nurse, to whose care the child was now definitively consigned, having purified her hands with water, ran naked with the infant in her arms, and accompanied by all the other females of the family, in the same state, round the hearth, which was regarded as the altar of Hestia, the Vesta of the Romans. By this ceremony the child was initiated in the rites of religion, and placed under the protection of the fire-goddess, probably with the same view that infants are baptized among us.

"Meanwhile the passer-by was informed that a fifth-day feast was celebrating within, by symbols suspended from the street-door, which, in case of a boy, consisted in an olive crown; and of a lock of wool, alluding to her future occupations, when it was a girl. Athenaeus, apropos of cabbage, which was eaten on this occasion, as well as by ladies 'in the straw,' as conducing to create milk, quotes a comic description of the Amphidromia from a drama of Ephippos, which proves they were well acquainted with the arts of joviality.

How is it

No wreathed garland decks the festive door,
 No savory odor creeps into the nostrils
 Since 't is a birth-feast? Custom, sooth, requires Slices of rich cheese from the Chersonese,
 Toasted and hissing; cabbage too in oil,
 Fried brown and crisp, with smothered breast of lamb.
 Chaffinches, turtle-doves, and good fat thrushes
 Should now be feathered; rows of merry guests
 Pick clean the bones of cuttle-fish together,
 Gnaw the delicious foot of polypi,
 And drink large drafts of scarcely mingled wine.'

"A sacrifice was likewise this day offered up for the life of the child, probably to the god Amphidromos, first mentioned, and therefore supposed to have been invented by Aeschylus. It has moreover been imagined that the name was now imposed, and gifts were presented by the friends and household-slaves.

"But it was on the seventh day that the child generally received its name, amid the festivities of another banquet; though sometimes this was deferred till the tenth. The reason is supplied by Aristotle. They delayed the naming thus long, he says, because most children that perish in extreme infancy die before the seventh day, which being passed, they considered their lives more secure. The eighth day was chosen by other persons for bestowing the name, and this, considered the natal day, was solemnized annually as the anniversary of its birth, on which occasion it was customary for the friends of the family to assemble together, and present gifts to the child, consisting sometimes of the polypi and cuttle-fish to be eaten at the feast. However, the tenth day appears to have been very commonly observed. Thus Euripides : —

‘ Say, who delighting in a mother’s claim
 ‘Mid tenth-day feasts bestowed the ancestral name ?

“ Aristophanes, too, on the occasion of naming his Bird-city, which a hungry poet pretends to have long ago celebrated, introduces Peisthetairos saying, —

‘ What ! have I not but now the sacrifice
 Of the tenth day completed and bestowed
 A name as on a child ? ’ ”

St. John, Vol. I. pp. 128 – 130.

— ὑπέπιον, I was taking a drop. “ Simili euphemismo Latini subbibere, Germani dicunt sich ein Räuschchen trinken.” Bothe. — ἐν ᾧσται, in town. He had come in from the country on the occasion of solemnizing the naming of a friend’s child.

495. κάρτι καθεύδον, and was just dropping asleep. — πρὶν δειπνεῖν. πρὶν usually takes the Infinitive in Attic Greek when the leading verb is affirmative. G. § 67 ; § 106.

496. ὄστος ἄρ’, this fellow then ; the cock. — ἐχώρον Ἀλιμούνταδε, I set out for Halimus. Observe the force of the imperfect tense. Halimus was a deme of the tribe of Leontis, particularly famous as being the birthplace of Thucydides, the historian, whose epitaph is said to have been, Θουκυδίδης Ὀλόρου Ἀλιμούστος ἐνθάδε κείται.

499. For the Imperfects, see v. 481.

501. Προκυλινδεῖσθαι τοῖς ἰκτίνοις. The allusion is to the custom of prostrating when the kite first appeared in spring, signifying joy at the return of that season. “ Ἐφ’ ᾧ ἡδόμενοι κυλίνδονται ὡς ἐπὶ γόνυ. Παιξας οὖν ὡς βασιλεῖ φησι τὸ κυλινδεῖσθαι ὑπὸ ἀνθρώπων.” Scholiast.

502, 503. Ἐκυλινδούμην . . . ἀφείλκον. Euelpides makes a sly allusion to the cause of his rolling over, in the oath by Dionysos, which is quite in keeping with the story of the frolic in town, related a few lines back. Then he does not say that he bowed forward, προκύλινδεῖτο; on the contrary, he was on his back. — Ὁβολὸν κατεβρόχθισα, I gulped down an obolos. The custom of carrying coins in the mouth is several times alluded to in Aristophanes, as Eccles. 817, 818: —

“Πωλῶν γὰρ βότρυς

Μεστὴν ἀπῆρα τὴν γνάθον χαλκῶν ἔχων,

Κᾶπειτ' ἐχώρουν εἰς ἀγορὰν ἐπ' ἄλφιστα.

“Ἐπειθ' ὑπέχοντος ἄρτι μου τὸν θύλακον,” etc.

See also Vesp. 790, seq.

505. ὁπότε εἴποι. G. § 62.

506. ἐθέριζον ἄν. G. § 30, 2.

507. κόκκυ. The rite of circumcision was practised by many Oriental nations, as the Egyptians, Phoenicians, and Jews; and as the cry of the cuckoo was the signal to begin harvesting among the people of these countries, the proverb came into use, — Cuckoo! Afield, ye circumcised!

508. εἴ τις βασιλείου. G. § 51.

510. Ἐπὶ . . . ὄρνις. They placed upon the head of the kingly sceptre the figure of some bird. This is often alluded to by the poets, and may be seen on coins, medals, and other works of art. See Quatremère de Quincy's Jupiter Olympien, pp. 306, seq. See also Pindar, Pyth. I. 9. — For δωροδοκοίη, see G. § 62; also for the optatives in v. 512 and 513.

512. ἐξέλθοι, here, is a word belonging to the vocabulary of the stage; came forth, i. e. entered the scene through the royal gate, or central entrance at the back of the stage. — ἐν τοῖσι τραγωδαῖς, at the tragic representations; literally, in the tragedians; the person being put for the time or the occasion of their appearance. This interpretation is more accordant with the Greek idiom than that of Bothe, —

 “Inter actores tragicos.”

513. Δυσικράτης. Of this individual the Scholiast says :
 “Οὗτος στρατηγὸς ἐγένετο Ἀθηναίων κλέπτῃς τε καὶ παροῦργος.
 Διεβέβλητο δὲ (ὥς) δωροδόκος.”

515. Ἄετόν κεφαλῆς. The words here used apply to the statue of Zeus, ἔστηκεν being constantly thus used by the Attic writers. According to a Scholiast, the head is put for the sceptre ; or, he adds, because they were accustomed to place on the heads of the statues of the gods the images of the birds consecrated to them.

516. θυγάτηρ, i. e. Athena, the patron goddess of the city to whom the owl was consecrated. All this passage is in ridicule of the Athenian superstition, which consecrated to each god some particular bird.

520. Ὡμν . . . ἄν. For this use of ἄν with the indicative, see G. § 30, 2. The Scholiast cites from Socrates, the historian, the following passage : “*Ῥαδάμανθους δοκεῖ διαδεξάμενος τὴν βασιλείαν δικαιοτάτος γεγενῆσθαι πάντων ἀνθρώπων.
 Λέγεται, δέ, αὐτὸν πρῶτον οὐδένα ἑῶν ὅρκους ποιεῖσθαι κατὰ τῶν θεῶν, ἀλλ’ ὀμνύναι κελεύσαι χῆνα, καὶ κύνᾱ, καὶ κριόν, καὶ τὰ ὅμοια.*” Socrates, according to Plato and Xenophon, used to swear by the dog, or by the goose, and sometimes simply by “the —.” See Plato’s Gorgias, cap. 22, and Woolsey’s note.

521. Λάμπων. This is the same Lampon — a soothsayer, juggler, and impostor — who is often mentioned elsewhere, and who, according to the Scholiast, obtained the honor of being entertained in the Prytaneum. See Clouds, 331 – 334, and note upon the passage. It is said that he used to swear by the goose because that bird was of a prophetic character. — ὅταν ἐξαπατᾷ. G. § 51.

522. ἐνόμιζον, used to think.

523. Μανᾶς. “Οὕτω γὰρ ἐκάλουν τοὺς οἰκέτας πολλάκις.”
 Scholiast.

525. λεροῖς. "Nam in templis tutae debebant esse aves, tanquam diis supplices; nefas autem violare supplices. Hinc cum Aristodicus Cumaeus in templo apud Branchidas nidos avium detraxisset et pullos exemisset, ex adyto talis vox audita fertur: Ἀνοσιώτατε ἀνθρώπων, τί τάδε τολμᾷς ποιέειν; Τοὺς ἱκέτας μου ἐκ τοῦ νηοῦ κεραΐζεις. Ut est ap. Herodotum I. 159; ap. Euripidem tamen Ion aedituus Apollinis Delphici pellit aves e templo in cognomini dramate 106, etc." Bergler.

530. βλιμάζοντες. "Βλιμάζειν κυρίως τὸ τοῦ ὑπογαστρίου καὶ τοῦ στήθους ἀπτεσθαι· ὅπερ ἐποιοῦν οἱ τοὺς θρῆνδας ὠνούμενοι, κ. τ. λ." Scholiast.

532. παρίθενθ. The frequentative aorist. For a full discussion of this usage, see Clouds, v. 520, note in Felton's edition. Κατεσκέδασαν, v. 536, is another example of the same idiom. G. § 30, 1.

541. κάκην = κακίαν.

542. προγόνων παραδόντων, genitive absolute, ancestors having handed them down.

543. Ἐπ' ἐμοῦ, in my case, i. e. here, to my harm.

547. οικήσω, I will dwell. Upon this expression, Cary remarks: "The word dwell, in our language, according to the old use of it, answers precisely to οικήσω, 'do good, and dwell for evermore,' Psalm xxxvii. 27, meaning simply to abide, or live."

549. εἰ μὴ κοιμοῦμεθα. § 50, 1, N. 1.

552. Βαβυλῶνα. For a full account of Babylon, see Herod. I.

553. Ὠ πόλισμα. The names here are those of two of the giants. The second is also the name of a bird, which offers an occasion for a jest below (1241). They are brought in here on account of the designed hostilities against the gods, as if another giants' war should disturb the peace of Olympus.

556. ἱερὸν πόλεμον προῦδαν, to proclaim a sacred war; like the wars against the Phocians for violating the sacred precincts and the temple of Pythian Apollo. The following lines give a ludicrous and satirical history of the mythical amours of the gods, and show, with many other passages, the freedom with which the poet dealt with the Hellenic religion, as well as with the politics of the time.

563-570. προσνείμασθαι, to distribute or assign. The meaning of the passage is, to apportion the birds individually to the gods, according to some fanciful analogy, so that, whenever a sacrifice is offered to a god, the corresponding bird may receive also an appropriate gift. The Scholiast and commentators have taken great pains to give the reasons why the particular selections and adaptations of gods, birds, and articles of food were adopted by the poet. Thus the name φαληρίς contains an allusion to the φάλλος, and of πυροί the Scholiast says: "Ἐπεὶ οἱ ἐφθοί πυροὶ πρὸς συνουσίαν ἐγερτικοί." The sheep is one of the victims sacrificed to Poseidon in the Odyssey, and the duck is connected with Poseidon, because he is a water bird. The λάρος is assigned to Hercules, on account of his gluttonous propensities. The ναστοί were a large species of cake, eaten at Athens with honey. With regard to Zeus and the wren, the Scholiast says: "Ἐπεὶ κατωφερῆς ὁ Ζεὺς καὶ μοιχός, διὰ τοῦτο ὀρχίλιον παρέλαβε, διὰ τοὺς ὄρχεις. Τὸ δὲ σέρφον ἔνορχιν ὡς κριὸν ἔνορχιν."

570. ἦσθην. G. § 19, N. 5.—Βροντάω . . . Ζάν. These words are probably quoted from some old lyric poet. Bothe cites from the epigrams: "Ὁ Ζεὺς πρὸς τὸν Ἐρωτα· Βέλη τὰ σὰ πάντ' ἀφελούμαι. Χὼ πτανός· Βρόντα, καὶ πάλι κύκνος ἔση."

572-575. Several of the deities were represented with wings. Hermes, as mentioned here, thus appears. The more ancient forms of the goddess Nike, or Victory, were without wings. To her a temple was dedicated, standing, according to Pausanias, near the entrance to the Acropolis. The ruins of this temple of Νίκη Ἀπτερος were discovered in excavating, in the year 1836, on the spot indicated by Pausanias, and it has been almost entirely restored. But Nike was generally represented, in works of art, with wings, and sometimes with golden or gilded ones; a figure of this kind was held in the right hand of the Olympian Zeus. (See Quatremère de Quincy, Jupiter Olympien; also Boetticher's Schriften, B. II. pp. 173, seq.) Especially was Eros, or Cupid, so represented. In alluding to Homer, the poet's memory failed him, the comparison to the timid dove being in a description of the flight of Hera and Athena (Il. V. 778), or there has been a change in the text, i. e. the substitution of Ἰρις for Ἥρα.

577. τὸ μὴδέν. The article gives emphasis to the expression, and probably refers it to the phraseology of the philosophers. The subject of the preceding verb is men, ἄνδρες, to be supplied. Μὴδέν (not οὐδέν) is used, because the Infinitive depends on a Protasis. The Infinitive after νομίζω usually takes οὐ as its negative, since it stands in indirect discourse.

580. Κἀπειτ' . . . μετρεῖται. The importation of corn was one of the most important public interests at Athens, and was carefully superintended by the municipal authorities. At certain times, distributions of corn (σιτοδοσίαι) took place among the people, — particularly, of course, in periods of scarcity, — each citizen receiving a certain measure. For a minute examination of this subject, see Boeckh's Public Economy of Athens, Book I. cap. 15. The language of Peisthetairos, in the present passage, doubtless alludes to this practice. Connected with the administration of the market, there were public officers called Μετρόνομοι and Προμητῆται. The poet ludicrously makes Demeter the measurer, and represents her as finding excuses, in the famine, for her inability to distribute corn.

583. ἐπὶ πείρῃ. The Scholiast says: “Ἐπὶ βλάβῃ, ἥ ἵνα περαθῶσιν ἡμῶν, εἰ θεοὶ ἴσμεν.” The latter is doubtless correct; the idea being, that the birds shall peck out the eyes of the cattle to give a proof of what they can do if their power is called in question.

584. Apollo was the god of medicine, as well as of poetry. With regard to the word μισθοφορεῖ, the Scholiast says: “Τοῦτο δὲ εἶπεν, ἐπεὶ Λαομέδοντα τῆς τειχοδομίας μισθὸν ᾔτησεν.” But there is also an allusion to the support of certain physicians at the public charge, for an account of whom see Boeckh, Book I. cap. 21. Hippocrates held this position at Athens.

585. Μή. Supply ἐκκοψάντων. For πρὶν ἄν, see G. § 67.

586. σὲ δὲ γῆν. The particle is used here to single out the clause.

589. λόχος εἷς. In the Athenian army, the λόχος was a small subdivision of soldiers, consisting of twenty-four besides the officer, or one fourth of a τάξις. The smallness of the number makes the expression more emphatic.

591. ἀγέλη. Perhaps the word here refers to the ἀγέλαι, or bands into which the youth were divided in Crete and Sparta, though it is also used in a general sense of a flock of birds. See Manso's Sparta.

592. πλουτεῖν is the object of δώσομεν. G. § 92, 1.

593. μαντενομένοις, consulting auguries.

595. ναυκλήρων. The ναύκληροι at Athens were the owners of ships, and their business was with the shipping interest. The word was also applied to the owners of houses. In this passage the former meaning is the true one. The ναύκληρος sometimes went himself upon the voyage, but not necessarily so. — ὥστε. G. § 65, 3.

598. This must be understood to be an aside of Euepides. Upon γαῦλος the Scholiast says: "Φοινικικὸν δὲ τοῦ ἀγγείου ὀξύγυνος. Καλλίμαχος· Κυπρόθε Σιδόνιός με κατήγαγεν ἐνθάδε γαῦλος. Ἄλλως. Γαῦλος, πλοῖόν τι φορτικὸν ὥς καὶ σκάφη (σκαφίς) ἀπὸ τῶν σκευῶν. Ὅμηρος· Γαῦλοί τε σκαφίδες τε. Ὡς αἰρετωτέρου δὲ ὄντος καὶ ἀκινδύνου τῶν ἄλλων πάντων τοῦτό φησι." And Bothe: "Γαῦλος dicebatur navis rotundior, mercibus vehendis apta, qualem Phoenices primi construxisse leguntur." — Οὐκ ἂν μείναιμι. G. § 51, 2, N.

599–601. The Athenians were as credulous about buried treasures as the moderns, and made use of superstitious means in the search for them. The language in the last line refers to the proverb, "Οὐδεὶς με θεωρεῖ πλὴν ὁ παριπτάμενος ὄρνις." "Τοῦτο ἐλέγτο ἐπὶ τῶν ἀγνώστων." Sch.

602. ὑδρίας. Literally, water-vessels, but also any urn or vessel such as might be used to hold the coins which were to be concealed in the earth.

603. ὑγίειαν. Upon this word Bothe has the following note:—"Haec est illa πλουθυγία, quam infra dicit 698, item Equ. 1100, et. Vesp. 647, h. e. quasi πλούτου ὑγία, non opes et sanitas, ut Br. reddidit Equ. v. 1, siquidem sanitatem donare nemo potest, divitias omnisque generis opes potest, quas complectitur ἡ πλουθυγία, ut pulcre intelligitur e Vesparum v. 1, ὑγιεντα δλβον serio dixit Pindarus, Ol. V. 55." It may be remarked in addition, that health was more sedulously studied by the ancient Greeks than by any of the moderns. Their gymnastic system formed an important and integral part of their education, and vigorous muscular exercise was not given up at any period of life. The national games also tended to keep alive a high, perhaps an exaggerated, idea of the importance of bodily health and strength. See the Panegyricus of Isocrates.

609. Οὐκ κορώνη; The saying quoted by Plu-tarch (De Orac. Def.) from Hesiod was, that the crow lives nine generations of man. The epithet λακέρυζα occurs in Hesiod's Works and Days, 747.

613. λαθίους, stone, i. e. marble, that being the principal material used in Athens for temples and other public buildings.

614. θυρῶσαι θύραις, to furnish the temples with golden doors.

616. σεμνοῖς = τοῖς τιμίαις. Sch.

618, 619. Δελφούς Ἄμμων, i. e. to the oracle of Apollo at Delphi, and of Zeus in Libya.

626. προβαλοῦσιν, having thrown out to them. A burlesque upon the popular notion that the gods were to be conciliated only by gifts. The argument is, that it will be much more economical to have the birds for gods than to worship the gods themselves.

627. ὦ μεταπίπτων. Φίλτατ' is the masculine adjective in the vocative. It is constructed with the participle, expressing the result of μεταπίπτων, changing from the most hated to the most beloved. In this respect it resembles the construction in Aesch. Ag. 628, Ἐπέκρανεν δὲ γάμον πικρὰς τελευτάς.

629. Ἐπαυχήσας, having confidence in.

638. τεταξόμεθ', we will take our post.

641. μελλονικιᾶν. A pun upon the name of Nikias, the general in the Sicilian Expedition whose hesitancy of conduct was more than once ridiculed by the poet. The Scholiast says: "Μελλονικιᾶν, τὸ βραδύνειν καὶ ἀναβάλλεσθαι. Νικίας γὰρ υἱὸς Νικηράτου, ὃς ἀνεβάλλετο ἀπελθεῖν εἰς Σικελίαν. βραδὺς γὰρ ἦν περὶ τὰς ἐξόδους." See Thucyd. VI. 25.

647. Κριῶθεν. The Scholiast explains: "Κριὸς δῆμος τῆς Ἀντιωχίδος φυλῆς, ἀπὸ Κριοῦ τινος ὠνομασμένος. Ἐράφεται δὲ καὶ Θριῆθεν, οἷον ἀπὸ δήμου τῆς Οἰνηίδος φυλῆς."

650. Ἄτὰρ πάλιν, But bless my soul! here, hold back again. τὸ δεῖνα, says Pape (Lexicon in verb.), is from the language of the people, used when one immediately utters a sudden thought, in order not to forget it, atat! — or when one cannot immediately recall something. In this passage it has suddenly occurred to Peisthetairos that there will be some practical difficulty in two men without wings holding intercourse with winged birds; and this sudden idea is intimated by τὸ δεῖνα. Ἐπανάκρουσαι is thus explained by the Scholiast: “Ἡ μεταφορὰ ἀπὸ τῶν τὰς ἡνίας ἀνακρουομένων, ἢ τὰς ναῦς. Ἄλλως. Ὑπόστρεψον, ἐπανάβηθι. Ἐπανάκρουσις δὲ ἐστὶ κυρίως τὸ ἐπισχεῖν τὴν ἐπερχομένην ναῦν καὶ μεθορμίσαι εἰς τὸν ὄρμον, ἵνα μὴ προσελθοῦσα θραυσθῇ.”

653–655. Αἰσώπου ποτέ. The fable here referred to is probably the same as that of which we find the first few lines in a fragment of Archilochus (No. 86, Bergk): Αἰνός τις ἀνθρώπων ὄδε, ὡς ἄρ' ἀλώπηξ καίετος ξυνωνήν ἔμιξεν. It must be remembered, that the ancients were accustomed to attribute to Aesop all fables that were composed in his manner. See note to v. 471.

658, 659. Ξανθία, Μανόδορε. Names of servants.

672. ὥσπερ παρθένος, like a maid. An imitation of Homer, Il. II. 872. For an account of the ornaments worn by Grecian ladies, see St. John, Vol. II. pp. 50, seq.

673. μοι δοκῶ, I have a fancy.

674. ῥύγχος ἔχει, she has a beak with two points, or literally, two spits. The actor representing this character wore a mask in imitation of the beak of a bird.

676. λέμμα, the shell.

686. Ἄρχον ἀναπαίστων, lead off the anapaests.

687–689. This description of the life of man is an imitation of the noble passage in Homer, Il. VI. 146. See also Aeschyl. Prom. 549, seq.

692–694. Upon this passage, Bothe has the following note: “Ridet poetas, qui de rerum originibus cecinerant (ut Hesiodus), et philosophos (ut Ionicos, Empedoclem), qui de deorum rerumque omnium ortu temere multa statuerant; etiam Sophistas, inter quos fuit Prodicus Ceus [quem laudat Chorus Nubium Nub. 360, σοφίας καὶ γνώμης οὐνεκα]. Hunc missum fieri vult. — Ut χαίρειν εἰπεῖν aliquem dicuntur, qui bono et amico animo ab eo dicedunt, sic κλαίειν εἰπεῖν est male animatorum. Vide Plut. 62, Ach. 1064, B. de Prodicō v. Hindenburgium et interpp. Xenophontis Memorab. Socr. 2, 1, 21, aliosque. Sextus Empir. adv. Mathem. p. 311: Πρόδικος ὁ Κεῖος· Ἥλιον, φησί, καὶ σελήην, καὶ ποταμούς, καὶ κρήνας, καὶ καθ' ὅλου πάντα τὰ ὠφελοῦντα τὸν βίον ἡμῶν οἱ παλαιοὶ θεοὺς ἐνόμισαν διὰ τὴν ἀπ' αὐτῶν ὠφέλειαν, καθάπερ Αἰγύπτιοι τὸν Νεῖλον· καὶ διὰ τοῦτο τὸν μὲν ἄρτον Δήμητραν νομισθῆναι, τὸν δὲ οἶνον Διόνυσον, τῷ δὲ ὕδωρ Ποσειδῶνα, τὸ δὲ πῦρ Ἡφαίστον, καὶ ἤδη τῶν εὐχρηστούντων ἕκαστον. Quam rationem irridens Cic. de Nat. Deor. I. 42: Prodicus Ceus, inquit, qui ea, quae prodesse hominum vitae, deorum in numero habita esse dixit, quam tandem religionem reliquit?

694. κλαίειν εἶπητε. G. § 15, 2, N. 8. Εἶπον seldom takes the Infinitive, unless it has the force of a verb of commanding, as here. In its ordinary sense, introducing indirect quotations, it takes ὅτι or ὥς. Φημί, on the other hand, takes only the Infinitive, while λέγω, to say, takes either ὅτι, ὥς, or the Infinitive. Λέγω may also mean to tell, to command.

697. ὑπνέμιον φόν. The Scholiast says: “Ὑπνέμια καλεῖται τὰ δῖχα συνουσίας καὶ μίξεως. — τίκτει, G. § 10, 2.

698. περιτελλομένας. This is an Homeric word, often applied to the revolutions of the seasons. See Il. II. 551; Od. XI. 295.

699. εἰκὼς δίναις. “Ταῖς τοῦ ἀνέμου ὠκείαις συστροφαῖς εἰκὼς, οἷον ταχύς.” Sch. “Εἰκὼς Atticis idem quod εἰκὼς. (Vide Moer. p. 148.) Δίναι proprie sunt vortices aquarum (Callim. in Del. 149), hinc, quaecunque in orbem aguntur (interpp. Thomae Mag. p. 241), hoc loco turbines. Ovid. Am. 2, 9, 49, De Amore: Tu levis es multoque tuis ventosior alis. B. Voss.: Der am Rücken mit zwei Goldfitigen glänzt, von Natur wie die wirbelnde Windsbraut." Bothe. See ante, note to v. 574.

701. Ἐνεόττευσεν, hatched.

702. πρίν. G. § 67, 1.

705, 706. Ἡμεῖς . . . δῆλον, And that we are children of Eros is plain by many proofs. They proceed to enumerate the aids they render to lovers, in a way that shows what sort of presents were considered by the Greeks the most acceptable to the objects of passion, namely, quails, geese, poultry, and the like.

709. δούς explains διὰ ἰσχύιν. G. § 109, 2.

711. ὥρας, the seasons, of which mention is made here according to the earliest and simplest division of the year into three portions.

712. σρείρειν, ὅταν, κ. τ. λ., i. e. in each year, when, &c. G. § 62.

713. Καὶ . . . καθεύδειν. The rudder was taken from the ship in winter. See Hesiod, Works and Days, 45:—

“Αἰψά κε πηδάλιον μὲν ὑπὲρ καπνοῦ καταδεῖο.”

714. Ὀρέστη. “Ὀρέστης μανίαν ὑποκρινόμενος ἐν τῷ σκότει τοὺς ἀνθρώπους ἀπέδυνεν. Sch. Cf. infra 1476, et Ach. 1092. Χλαῖνα crassior vestis superior fuit, hiemi apta. Vide Hesych. h. v. ριγῶν, prae frigore horrens. Vide Thom. Mag. p. 782, et Bos. Obs. Crit. p. 48. Ἀποδύειν est aliquem spoliare vestibus, ut Eccl. 864, 866.” Bothe.

716. χλαῖναν, ληθάριον. The former was a thick outside garment, the second a light summer garment. For a minute explanation of Grecian dress, see Becker's Charicles, Scene XI. Excursus I., and St. John, Vol. II. cap. 25; also Hope's Costumes, — ἡνίκα. G. § 59. — πεκτεῖν. G. § 92, 1, N. 2.

721. ὄρνις. Here and in the following lines, there is a play on the word ὄρνις, bird, which is often used for any omen whatever. The things or acts mentioned were all significant to the mind of the Greek, — a word, a sneeze, an accidental meeting, a sound, a servant suddenly appearing, an ass. Upon the last a Scholiast says: “Λέγεται γάρ τι τοιοῦτον, ὡς συμβολικῶς ἐρωτώμενος περὶ ἀρρώστου εἶδεν ὄνον ἐκ πτόματος ἀναστάντα, ἀκήκοε δὲ ἐτέρου λέγοντος· Βλέπε, πῶς ὄνος ὦν ἀνέστη. Ὁ δὲ ἔφη· Ὁ νοσῶν ἀναστήσεται.”

725–728. The oracles of the gods could not be consulted at all seasons of the year; but substituting the birds for the gods, men will have the advantage of being able to consult them at all seasons alike.

729. σεμνυόμενοι, putting on haughty airs.

736. Γάλα τ' ὀρνίθων, and milk of birds; a proverbial expression. “Ἐν παροιμίᾳ δὲ ἐπὶ τῶν λίαν εὐδαιμονούντων καὶ πάντα κεκτημένων.” Sch.

752. Φρύνιχος. “Ὅς ἐπὶ μελοποιαῖς ἐθαυμάζετο. . . . Πουητὴς ἡδὺς ἐν τοῖς μέλεσι.” Sch. See Darley's Grecian Drama, Ch. II. The comparison of the poet to a bee gathering sweets from every flower is a very common one.

759. εἰ . . . ἐστίν. G. § 49, 1.

760, 761. ἦν εἴπη. G. § 50, 1. — εἰ μαχεῖ, if you want to fight. G. § 49, 1, N. 3 (not § 50, 1, N. 1).

761. αἶρε πλῆκτρον, lift the spur. The expression is borrowed from cock-fighting.

762. δραπέτης ἐστιγμένος, a branded runaway; in allusion to the custom of burning upon the persons of fugitive slaves a mark which designated them as στιγματῖαι, a common term of abuse in the popular language of Athens.

764. Σπινθάρου. “Σπινθ. ap. Demosth. p. 1259 et 1358, ed. Reisk. Spinthari memorantur. B. — Compar Spinthari Philemon, homo obscurus: cave enim cognominem intelligas Comicum, Menandri aequalem.” Bothe.

765. Φρυγίλος. "Propter similitudinem cum voce Phryx, Phrygis, significari putatur fringilla (der Finke). B. fringillan carduelem Linn., le chardonneret, den Stieglitz, intelligebat Wieland. Voss.: Frygischer (?) Rothfink wird er hier sein, von Filemons Vitterschaft." Bothe.

766. Κάρ. "Cares, ex quibus plurimi serviebant, barbaros atque agrestes, militiaeque mercenariae, quae despecta erat, auctores, habitos fuisse, monuere Spanhem. ad Ran. 1231, Hemsterh. ad argum. Pluti, Aristoph. Beck. 3, p. 7, aliique. Cf. supra, v. 295, et de Exceestide 11." Bothe.

767. Φυσάτω πάππους. According to Euphronius, as quoted by Aelian, a certain species of bird was called πάππος. There is, therefore, a pun upon the expression, besides the ludicrous inversion of the order of nature which the literal meaning implies. In the rest of the line, the terms refer to the distribution of the Athenians, according to which the φρατρία was a third part of one of the four Ionic tribes, and the members of this division were called φράτορες. These divisions had their registers, in which the names and families of the individuals composing them were required to be entered. Bothe says: "Φύσαι πάππους est facere, ut sibi avi sint, adsciscere avos; qui enim Athenis peregrinitatis accusabantur, avos et tribules nominare debebant, ut appareret, cives ipsos esse."

768. ὁ Πισίου. "Οὐδὲν σαφὲς ἔχομεν, τίς ὁ Πισίου, οὗτε περὶ τῆς προδοσίας· ὅτι δὲ τῶν λίαν πονηρῶν ἐστὶ, δημοῖ Κρατίνος ἐν Χείροσι, Πυλαίας, Ὁραϊς.—"Ἄλλως. Οἱ μὲν, τὸν Πισίαν ἓνα τῶν ἐρμκοπιδῶν εἶναι, οἱ δὲ τὸν υἱὸν αὐτοῦ. Ἐτῆρουντο δὲ οὗτοι, ὅπως ἂν δοίεν τῆς περικοπῆς τιμωρίαν. Εἰ οὖν, φησὶν, ὁ υἱὸς αὐτοῦ τοῦ Πισίου ὁμοίως βούλεται εἶναι τῷ πατρί, γενέσθω πέρδιξ πανοῖργος." Schol.—"Τοῖς ἀτίμοις. The force of this term is not adequately expressed by our word dishonored or by disfranchised. An Athenian citizen in full possession of all his rights (τιμαί) was called ἐπίτιμος; and so soon as he lost all of these rights or any one or more of them, he became ἄτιμος, and was said to be under ἀτιμία. Ἀτιμία could therefore be either partial or complete. 1. Partial ἀτιμία deprived a citizen of some particular right or τιμή, and was quite common as a punishment for abusing a right or privilege. For example, any prosecutor who, in a public suit, did not receive one fifth of the votes of the judges (usually 100 out of 501), was fined a thousand drachmas and prohibited from bringing a similar public suit for the future. This prohibition was called ἀτιμία. Others were prohibited from entering temples or the market-place; others from speaking in the public assembly; others from being members of the Senate or from holding office; others again from visiting certain places in the Athenian dominions. All these were ἄτιμοι; but their ἀτιμία was partial, and their other rights were not affected. 2. Complete ἀτιμία, on the other hand, deprived a man of all the rights and privileges which he had enjoyed as a citizen of Athens, and left him in a sort of negative condition, in which the state simply refused to recognize him as a part of itself. As Lysias says, it made men ἀντὶ πολιτῶν ἀπολιδας. Demosthenes (in Mid. p. 544, 10) speaks of it as καὶ νόμων καὶ δικῶν καὶ πάντων στέρησις. It left him like a foreigner, without civic rights, dependent entirely upon the good-will or mercy of his neighbors for protection to his life and property. He could enter no public temple, and of course could sue or be sued in no court of law. See the striking description given by Demosthenes (in Mid. p. 544, 545), who calls a man who is under ἀτιμία before the court, while he narrates his story; the man, however, must stand speechless. This kind of ἀτιμία was inflicted as a punishment by law for various offences, such as corruption, embezzlement, cowardice or desertion in war, perjury, neglect or abuse of parents, prostitution (ἐραίρησις), insult to officers of the state, abuse of confidence (as in the case of an arbitrator), and similar offences.

Public debtors of all kinds were under complete ἀριμία until their debts were paid. 'Αριμία in itself included neither confiscation of property nor a descent of the father's disgrace by inheritance to the children: either or both of these could, however, be added to ἀριμία in special cases. Those guilty of murder, treason, or gross sacrilege, if they left the country before actual conviction, were condemned to perpetual banishment and confiscation of property. (Demosth. in Mid. p. 528, 7; Xen. Hell. I. 7, 22.) So for the offence mentioned by Demosth. in Neaer. p. 1363, 5. See also Dem. in Lept. p. 504, 22. In other cases the ἀριμία is to descend to posterity, as is provided in the laws quoted by Demosth. in Aristocr. p. 640, 1; in Mid. p. 551, 25: here the confiscation of property seems always to have been included. Public debtors, although they were wholly ἀριμοί so long as they remained debtors, could yet regain their rights by payment of the debt; on the other hand, if they died indebted to the state, their ἀριμία descended with the debt, as a part of the inheritance, to the children. Those who suffered ἀριμία as a punishment for a crime remained ἀριμοί through life: they could be reinstated only by an extraordinary act of grace, which was always looked upon as exceptional and illegal. Such reinstatements occurred only when the state was in extreme danger, as, for example, after the battle of Chaeronea. (See Grote, Vol. XI. p. 694.) See Hermann, Staatsalterthümer, §§ 124 and 52; Privatalterth. § 70; with the authorities quoted in the notes: also Meier, De Bonis Damnatorum, passim. An important classical passage is found in Andocides, De Myster. §§ 73-76." Goodwin.

770. ἐκπερδίκισαι. This word alludes to the shy habits of the partridge, and the dexterity of the bird in avoiding pursuit. To dodge like a partridge would express, in a roundabout way, the meaning of the Greek. The Scholiast remarks further: "Διαβάλλει δὲ ὡς κατεγνώσμενον καὶ φυγῇ ζημωθέντα. Οἱ δὲ πέρδικες πανούργοι ὄντες εὐχερῶς διαδιδράσκουσι τοὺς θηρευτάς, πολλάκις ὕπτιοι γενόμενοι καὶ ἐπιβάλλοντες ἑαυτοῖς κάρφη. Φησὶν οὖν, ὅτι καὶ παρ' ἡμῖν γενόμενος δύναται πάλιν φεύγειν."

783. ἀνακτας, kings, i. e. here, according to the Homeric usage, the gods.

787. Αἰτίχ', just for example.

788-790. Εἶτα κατέπατο. These lines, and the freer ones which follow, must be considered in reference to the mode of dramatic representation at Athens, for a particular account of which, see Donaldson's Theatre of the Greeks. We may say here, in general, that these representations were limited to a few successive days, several dramas being brought out, one after the other, beginning early in the morning. The long exhibitions of the tragedians could not fail to be bantered by the license of the comedians. Bothe thinks it probable that the tragedies were acted in the morning, having the precedence on account of their superior dignity, and the comedies in the afternoon; "cum paratiores ad jocos essent animi spectantium; quo pertinere dicas, quod avolantem illum a choris tragicis post prandium redire posse ait ἐφ' ἡμᾶς, ad nos, comoedos, ni fallor." It may be presumed that the arrangements differed at different times.

795. βουλευτικῷ. The theatre was divided, and some of the seats were set apart for the several official bodies of the state, for the ἑφηβοί, for foreign ministers, &c. The portion here alluded to was that which was occupied by the members of the Senate of Five Hundred. As the Scholiast says: "Οὗτος τόπος τοῦ θεάτρου ἀνειμένος, τοῖς βουλευταῖς, ὡς καὶ ὁ τοῖς ἐφήβοις ἐφηβικός. Παρ' ὑμῶν δὲ ἀντὶ ἀπὸ τοῦ θεάτρου."

799-801. The Diitrephes mentioned here is said by the Scholiast to have acquired wealth by the manufacture of willow wicker-baskets for wine-flasks. Having accomplished thus much, it seems he aspired to the high offices of state. The φύλαρχοι were ten officers of cavalry, elected one from each tribe, but in the general assemblies of the people. They were subordinate to the ἵππαρχοι, who were two in number, also chosen to exercise the general command in the cavalry service; so that Diitrephes, in passing from one office to the other, rose a grade in military dignity. — ἐξ οὐδενὸς μεγάλη πράττει, from nothing (or nobody) he is flourishing greatly. — ἱππαλεκτρῶν. “Βουλευτής. Ὁ γὰρ ἀλεκτρῶν ἐν τοῖς ὄρνισι τιμώτερος. Navis hoc insigne fuisse, ex Ran. 883, intelligitur. Praeterea monuit B., fictae avis nomen usurpari, quo significetur, Diitrephem istum superbe et cum fastu quodam incedere, itaque manere Comicum in metaphora de avibus et volatu. Posse etiam ἱππαλεκτρύονα esse magnum gallinaceum secundum Sch., quae vis est τοῦ ἵππος in multis compositis; qua de re laudat Fischeri annot. ad Weller. III. 1, p. 237.” Bothe.

802. Ταυτὶ τοιαντί. A colloquial expression = Well, this will do. Peisthetairos and Euelpides come out of the house of Epops, having partaken of the root which should furnish them with a growth of wings. They cannot help laughing at each other's ridiculous appearance.

806. Εἰς συγγεγραμμένῳ, to a cheaply (or badly) painted goose. “Contrarium εἰς κάλλος. Aeneas Soph., Epist. 25: Μὴ ταῦτόν πάθοιμεν, ὥσπερ ἂν εἴ τις ζωγράφος τὴν Ἑλένην εἰς κάλλος (elegant) γράφων τῆς κεφαλῆς ἐπιλάβοιτο.” Bergler.

809. Τὰδ' πετροῖς. This refers to a passage found in the fragments of the Myrmidons of Aeschylus. (No. 123, Dind.; No. 135, Nauck.) The Scholiast says: “Ἐκείνος γὰρ Διβυστικὴν αὐτὴν καλεῖ παροιμίαν.”

‘Ὡς δ' ἔστι μύθων τῶν Διβυστικῶν λόγος,

Πληγέντ' ἀτράκτω τοξικῶ τὸν ἀετὸν

Εἰπεῖν ἰδόντα μηχανὴν πτερώματος·
 Τὰδ' οὐχ ὑπ' ἄλλων, ἀλλὰ τοῖς αὐτῶν πτεροῖς
 'Ἀλυσκόμεσθα.'

Πεποίηκε γὰρ ὁ Αἰσχύλος ἀετὸν τρωννύμενον καὶ λέγοντα ταῦτα, ἐπειδὴ εἶδε τὸ βέλος ἐπτερωμένον καὶ ἐμπεπαρμένον αὐτῷ. Καὶ ἡμεῖς οὖν, φησὶν, οὐχ ὑπ' ἄλλων πάσχομεν ταῦτα, ἀλλὰ τῇ ἐαυτῶν γνώμῃ." The idea was made use of by Waller, as quoted by Porson and Wheelwright:—

"That eagle's fate and mine are one,
 Who on the shaft that made him die
 Espied a feather of his own,
 Wherewith he wont to soar so high."

And by Byron, also, in his "English Bards and Scotch Reviewers," in the beautiful lines on Kirke White:—

"So the struck eagle, stretched upon the plain,
 No more through rolling clouds to soar again,
 Viewed his own feather on the fatal dart,
 And winged the shaft that quivered in his heart;
 Keen were his pangs, but keener far to feel
 He nursed the pinion that impelled the steel;
 While the same plumage that had warmed his nest Drank the last life-drop of his bleeding breast."

815. καλῶμεν. G. § 88.

816, 817. Σπάρτην κειρίαν. It is not easy to give an English equivalent for the pun in this passage. Besides being the name of the city, Σπάρτη meant a rope made of spartum, or broom, and used for bed-cords, while κειρία was also the cord, stouter than the other, for a bedstead. The whole is, probably, an expression of the Athenian dislike of Sparta, conveyed in a joke. It is likely the words had some association, now lost, which gave a pungency to the allusion that we are unable to feel. This passage is referred to by Eustathius in the commentary on Il. I.—οὐδ' ἂν χαμεύνη (sc. θείμην), I would not put one even on my bedstead.—ἔχων = εἰ ἔχοιμε. G. § 109, 6; § 52, 1.

820. Χαῦνόν τι πάνν, something very grand, or pomptous. — Νεφελοκοκκυγίαν, Cloud-cuckootown. Lucian, in his amusing work, Verae Historiae (the original of Gulliver's Travels), refers to this place.

824, 825. Θεογίνους, Αισχίνου. Of the former of these personages, both of whom were boasters of wealth which they did not possess, the Scholiast says: “Λέγεται, ὅτι μεγαλέμπορος τις ἐβούλετο εἶναι, περαιῖτης ἀλαζών, ψευδόπλουτος. Ἐκαλεῖτο δὲ Καπνός, ὅτι πολλὰ ὑπισχνούμενος οὐδὲν ἐτέλει. Εὖπολις ἐν Δήμοις”;—and of the latter: “Οὗτος πένης, θρηνπτόμενος καὶ αὐτὸς ἐπὶ πλούτῳ.”

826, 827. The bragging is imputed jestingly, and in a humorous shifting of the construction, to the gods, instead of to the giants. The plain of Phlegra was in Thrace, where the poets laid the scene of the mythical conflict between the gods and giants. According to Herodotus (VII. 123), Phlegra was the ancient name of Pallene, with which the statement of Strabo (VII. frag. 27) agrees.

829. Πολιοῦχος. Patron deity of the city, as Athena was at Athens. — πέπλον. This was the sacred shawl, or mantle, borne in the Panathenaic procession to the Acropolis, and placed on the statue of Athena. It was wrought by the Athenian maidens, and covered with figures representing incidents in the mythical accounts connected with the history of the goddess herself. Representations of the procession still exist in the remains of the friezes of the Parthenon, which have been often published. There is a figure of Athena in the Dresden Museum, wearing a peplus which represents the Olympic gods conquering the giants. (See Müller's Denkmäler der alten Kunst, Pl. X. No. 36.) The allusion to the peplus in such close connection with this fable makes it probable that the poet has seen this very representation of the subject.

830. πολιάδα. The epithet of Athena as the goddess of the city.

832, 833. πανοπλίαν Κλεισθένης. The circumstance that Athena Polias was represented with a complete suit of armor gave the poet an opportunity for a sarcasm upon the effeminacy of this noted profligate.

834. Πελαργικόν. There was a portion of the ancient wall of the Acropolis, called the Pelasgic wall, which the Athenians believed to have been built by a wandering band of Pelasgians, who were said to have appeared in Athens about 1100 B. C. (Herod. VI. 137; Pausan. I. 28, 23.) The poet here seems to allude to a fanciful derivation of the name Πελασγοί from πελαργοί, storks, to which Strabo refers (V. p. 221), speaking of the compiler of the Ἀτθίς as narrating, in regard to the Pelasgian race, διὰ τὸ πλανήτας εἶναι καὶ δίκην ὀρνέων ἐπιφοιτῶν ἐφ' οὗς ἔτυχε τόπους Πελαργούς ὑπὸ τῶν Ἀττικῶν κληθῆναι. See also Dion. Hal. Ant. I. 28. At any rate, he has a chance, seldom neglected, of punning upon the resemblance of the name to the word πελαργός, stork; a name, therefore, well suited to the walls of Bird-town.

837. Ἄρεως νεοττός, the chicken of Ares.

838. ἐπιτήδειος οἰκεῖν. G. § 93, 1, N. 2 (b).—ἐπὶ πετρῶν. The Pelasgic wall was on the precipitous side of the rocky Acropolis. The Scholiast says: "Δίδυμός φησι τὸ Πελασγικὸν τεῖχος ἐπὶ πετρῶν κείσθαι." Here the Persian bird, the cock, as being martial and pugnacious, was to dwell and defend the citadel.

839–847. Peisthetairos now bids his companion to mount the air, and help the builders. He is to carry the rubble-stone (χάλικας), to strip himself and mix the mortar (πηλὸν ἀποδύς ὕγρασον), to carry up the hod (λεκάνην), and, for the sake of a little variety, to tumble down the ladder. "Quia," says Blaydes, "aliquando id aedificantibus in ascendendo eam (i. e. scalam) et descendendo accidit." Then he is to see to having the sentries stationed; to take care and cover the embers, so that the workmen may always have fire within reach; to run round, with a little bell, to keep the sentinels alert. This was the duty of the officers. See Thucyd. IV. 135. Then, by way of relief, he is told to get a nap whenever he can. He is also to despatch a herald up to the gods, and another down to men; and, having attended to these various orders, he is to come back for fresh directions.

848. Οἴωζε παρ' ἔμ'. Euelpides is vexed at these orders. He gives utterance to his vexation jocosely, by repeating the last words of Peisthetairos, παρ' ἐμέ, in a different sense; and instead of the usual form of polite leave-taking, χαῖρε, the grumbles out, Οἴωζε, groan, — Devil take you, παρ' ἔμ', for all I care.

851. πῆμψοντα τὴν πομπήν, who shall conduct the procession, i. e. the religious ceremonies connected with the organization of the commonwealth, and its consecration to the gods.

852. Παῖ . . . χέρνιβα. The servants are directed to take up the basket and the ewer. Says Bothe: "Monuit B. secundum Abresch. Anim. ad Aeschylum t. 1, p. 503, seq., et Dawes. Misc. Crit., p. 235, αἶρειν κανοῦν esse afferre cunistrum, sed αἶρεσθαι κ. id portandum in pompa suscipere, et παῖ, παῖ, etc., dici pro hoc ᾧ παῖδες (servi), ὑμῶν ὁ μὲν αἰρέσθω τὸ κανοῦν, ὁ δὲ ἕτερος τὴν χέρνιβα. — Sch.: τὴν χέρνιβα. Τὸ ὕδωρ. — B.: τὴν χέρνιβα ap. Hom. esse aquam ad ablundas manus, χέρνιβον autem vas, quo aqua illa continetur, docuerunt interpp. Pollucis, p. 1292, hoc tamen loco χέρνιψ pro χέρνιβω poni videtur (per synecdochen)."

853–860. According to the Scholiast, these lines of the chorus are a parody upon a passage in the Peleus of Sophocles. (See Nauck. Frgm. No. 446, 447.) — Πυθιάς βοά, the Pythian cry; that is, the Paean. — Χαῖρις. This was a poor Theban piper. The Scholiast says: "ὧς αὐτομάτως ἐπιώντος αὐτοῦ ταῖς εὐωχίαις. Ἦν δὲ ὁ Χαῖρις οὗτος καθαρθός, καὶ γέγονεν αὐλητής. Μνημονεύει δὲ αὐτοῦ καὶ Φερεκράτης ἐν Ἀγρίοις· Φέρ' ἴδω, καθαρθὸς τίς κάκιστος ἐγένετο; — Ὁ Πεισίου Μέλῃς. — Μετὰ δὲ Μέλῃτα τίς; — Ἐχ' ἀτρίμ', ἐγφῆδα· Χαῖρις."

854. συμπαρανέσας ἔχω. G. § 112, N. 7.

863. κόρακ' ἐμπεφορβιωμένον. The piper was a crow, i. e. the actor represented a crow by decking himself with a crow's head. He also wore a mouthpiece, like any other piper, and so astonished Peisthetairos by the oddity of the combination.

The scene that follows is a daring burlesque upon the sacrificial ceremonies of the Athenians in building the foundation of a new city. The priest lays the offerings upon the altar, and then invokes the new gods, beginning, according to custom, with Ἑστία (Bird-Vesta), and applying to the birds epithets parodied from the solemn designations of the deities. The comic poets were allowed to use great freedom in dealing with the popular religion.

869. Σουνιέρακε. This is taken from Σουνιάρως, an epithet of Poseidon. See Aristoph. Eq. 560, and Σουνιάρως in Liddell and Scott.

870. Πυθίη. "Epitheta Apollinis tribuit cyeno, qui Apollini sacer est. Latona autem in Ortygia insula, quae ἀπὸ τῶν ὀρνύγων, a coturnicibus dicta est, Apollinem peperit et Dianam." Bergler. To which Blaydes adds: "Latona igitur, quoad mulier est, ὀρνυγομήτρα dicitur, ut quae in Ortygia insula pepererit; quoad avis est, quia coturnix ingens."

872. Κολαινίς. A name under which Artemis was worshipped by the inhabitants of Myrrhinus, an Athenian deme of the tribe Pandionis. Pausanias speaks of a wooden statue of the goddess, under this appellation, which existed in the district of Myrrhinus in his day. The joke upon the paronomasia between Κολαινίς and Ἀκαλανθίς, a goldfinch, is not very pointed.

873. φρυγίλφ σαβαζίφ. Sabazius was the name of the Phrygian Bacchus. Φρυγίλος, a chaffinch, is a punning allusion to the Phrygians.

875. Κλεοκρίτου. This individual is mentioned in the Frogs (1437) as a large, heavy person, and this is the reason why Peisthetairos makes the ostrich mother Cybele and mother of Cleocritus.

877. αὐτοῖσι καὶ Χίοισι. The Chians were useful allies to the Athenians at the beginning of the Peloponnesian war, and at other times. Wherefore, according to the statement of the historian Theopompus, quoted by the Scholiast, they were accustomed to pray to the gods, Χίοις τε δίδουαι ἀγαθὰ καὶ σφίσιν αὐτοῖς, to bestow blessings on the Chians and on themselves. See Thucyd. IV. 51. Eupolis, also quoted by the Scholiast, has the following lines : —

“ Αὕτη Χίος, καλὴ πόλις .

Πέμπει γὰρ ὑμῖν ναὺς μακράς, ἄνδρας δ' ὅταν δέῃῃ

Καὶ τᾶλλα πειθαρχεῖ καλῶς, ἀπληκτος ὥσπερ ἵππος.”

878. Χίοισιν . . . προσκειμένοις. The manner in which Peisthetairos speaks of the custom of always adding the Chians in public prayers shows, as the commentators well remark, that their fidelity was a subject of ironical commendation. And, in point of fact, immediately after the disasters of the Sicilian expedition, the Chians, together with the Erythraeans, went over to the Lacedaemonians. See Thucyd. VIII. 4.

879 – 883. The birds joined as heroes in the invocation are : — πορφυρίωνι, the porphyryion (purple water-fowl). — πελεκάντι, pelican, still called in Greece πελεκάνι (the Pelecanus crispus ; see Von der Mühle, p. 132, who says this was the only pelican known to the ancient Greeks, and that it is very common in Greece through the whole year, frequenting especially the lakes and swamps). — πελεκίνῳ, the spoon or shovel-bill (Platalea leucorodius, Von der Mühle, p. 118). — φλεξίδα. This is considered an unknown bird. The name does not occur in Aristotle. From its etymology, however, it must have been bright-colored. I venture to suggest that it may be one of the bloodfinches, and probably the Pyrhula serinus, of which Von der Mühle says: "It is very common in Greece, wherever there are fruit-trees. It assumes there an external fiery" (φλεξίς) "or intense coloring. In autumn and winter, it wanders about the solitary fields in company with linnets and greenfinches." (p. 46.) — τέτρακι, the heathcock. — ταῶνι, the peacock. — ἐλεῖ, a bird mentioned by Aristotle, Hist. An. IX. 16. 2, as having a pleasant voice. Its habits, as described by him, correspond with those of the dipper, or water-ousel, which it probably is. — βάσκα, the teal; probably the Anas crecca, described by Von der Mühle as being found pretty frequently in Greece, in the winter. — ἐλασῶ, another unknown bird; but from the company which he keeps here, he must have affinities with the teal. The name would seem to mean the marcher, or driver, from ἐλαύνω. Probably it is the bittern (Ardea stellaris), which, according to Von der Mühle (p. 116), is found in Greece all the year round. Its attitudes and movements are stiff, like those of a soldier on the march. — ἐρωδιῶ, the heron. — καταράκτη, a bird described by Aristotle, Hist. An. IX. 12, 1, as living on the sea, and diving and remaining long under water; commonly, but incorrectly, translated gannet. It is a diver, and should be called shear-water, or storm-petrel. — μελαγκορύφῳ, the black-headed warbler, or black-cap (Sylvia melanocephala), whose habits are described by Von der Mühle (p. 71), and mentioned several times by Aristotle; sometimes called the monk. — αἰγιθάλλῳ, the titmouse, of which Aristotle mentions three species (Hist. An. VIII. 5, 3), probably Aegithallus pendulinus. See Von der Mühle, p. 48.

884. Παν', παῦσαι. Observe that the active and middle forms are used apparently without distinction. — καλῶν. G. § 112, 1. — ἐς κόρακας, a ludicrous introduction of a common imprecation, suggested here by the invocation of so many birds.

885. ἱερεῖον, the victim which the priest is about to sacrifice; the same as the προβάτιον in v. 858.

887. τοῦτο, i. e. the victim.

890. The priest, ordered away by Peisthetairos, changes his tune, and promises to invoke only one of the gods. "Sollicitus nimirum," says Blaydes, "ne, cura sacri peragendi Pisthetaero mandata, ipse nullam extorum partem habiturus sit. Sacerdoti enim victimae reliquiae ut et pellis solebant dari."

894, 895. εἴπερ ἔξετε, at least, if you are to have, &c. G. § 49, 1, N. 3. (See above, v. 761, and note.)

897. Γένειον καὶ κέρατα. Like the English skin and bone.

899. In the entertaining scene which follows, the poet indulges in a pleasant vein of satire at the expense of the lyric and dithyrambic poets. The reader of the Clouds will remember several passages in the same spirit in that play. Before the consecrating ceremonies are fairly completed, one of these ballad-mongers arrives, with dithyrambic verses cut and dried in honor of the new city. The reader will note the amusing mockery by which the poet introduces the Doric peculiarities of style, and, in general, the lyrical movements even of Pindar himself. Peisthetairos meets him with astonishment and contempt.

904. Μουσάων θεραπόντων ὄτρηρός. The poet perhaps alludes to such passages in Homer as Odys. IV. 23:—

Ὀτρηρὸς θεράπων Μενελάου κυδάλιμοιο.

Perhaps he had also in mind the lines preserved from the Margites:—

Ἥλθέ τις εἰς Κολοφῶνα γέρων καὶ θεῖος ἀοιδός, Μουσάων θεράπων καὶ ἐκηβόλου Ἀπάλλωνος,
 Φίλῃς ἔχων ἐν χερσὶν εὐφρογγον λύρην.

Compare also Archilochus, Frag. 1 (52):—

Εἰμὶ δ' ἐγὼ θεράπων μὲν Ἐνυαλίῳ ἄνακτος, Καὶ Μουσείων ἐρατὸν δῶρον ἐπιστάμενος.

906. κόμην ἔχεις. It was the fashion among the young gentlemen at Athens to wear long hair. See Clouds, v. 348. But, of course, the slaves could not be allowed to imitate them. The poet calls himself "the busy slave of the honey-tongued Muses."

907. διδάσκαλοι, teachers. In dramatic affairs, the διδάσκαλος was properly the one who trained the chorus and the actors, and, as this was done mostly by the poet himself, it also meant the poet.

910. ὀτρηρὸν ληδάριον. Brunck says: "Poetae amiculum ὀτρηρὸν jocosè vocat, quia erat τετρημένον." Cary translates the line, "Troth, and thy jacket has seen service, too." It is as if the poet had called himself the holy servant of the Muses, and Peisthetairos had replied, "Thou hast a holy jacket, too."

911. κατὰ . . . ἀνεφθάρης; A jocosè perversion, instead of ἀνέπτῃς, equivalent to "What the devil brought you up here?" Bothe, however, shows that φθείρεσθαι is also used, though in a somewhat different sense, where no such play upon the word is intended. He cites from Demosthenes, in Mid. p. 560, 8: Ἀλλὰ δεινοὶ τινές εἰσιν, ὧ ἄνδρες Ἀθηναῖοι, φθείρεσθαι πρὸς τοὺς πλουσίους, i. e. in joining themselves to the rich to their own hurt.

912–914. Μῆλη, κύκλια, παρθένεια, Σιμωνίδου. Cyclic songs, that is, songs sung by circular choruses round the altars of the gods, generally in honor of Dionysos; and songs sung in the same manner by choruses of maidens, in the composition of which Simonides excelled. For an excellent account of the different species of Greek lyrical composition, see Müller's History of Greek Literature, Chapters XIV., XV.

916. πάλαι κλήζω. G. § 10, 1, N. 3.

917. δεκάτην. See note to 494.

919-925. This poetical flight is in imitation of one of Pindar's Hyporchemes. See Donaldson's Pindar, pp. 356, 357. The words are also alluded to by Plato, Phaedrus, p. 236 D.

924. Τῇ κεφαλῇ, "nutu tui capitis." Blaydes.

925. ἐμὶν τείν. Says Blaydes: "Mihi tibi. Dorice pro ἐμοί, σοί. Dithyrambicos irridet, et praecipue Pindarum, qui hujusmodi Dorismos ingerebant. Apud Pindarum τὸ ἐμὶν frequens est in petitionibus, ut monet Scholiasta. Riddle hic igitur τείν post ἐμὶν infert dithyrambicus, quasi poetam donando aliquo munere sibimet benefactor sit Pisthetaerus, propter eximia carmina, quibus eum celebrans poeta gratiam relaturus sit."

926. παρέξει . . . πράγματα, will give us trouble.

927. Εἰ . . . ἀποφενξούμεθα, Unless we shall get rid of him by giving him something. G. § 50, 1, N. 1.

928. ὄθος. Addressed to an attendant.—σπολάδα. This was an outside garment made of skin.

931-940. The words of the poet are still a parody upon Pindar. See Donaldson's Pindar, p. 357.

“Νομάδεσσι γὰρ ἐν Σκύθαις ἀλᾶται Στράτων,

Ἵος ἀμαξοφόρητον οἶκον οὐ πέπεται·

Ἄκλεης δ' ἔβα.

“This fragment is part of the same Hyporcheme as the preceding, and is derived from the same source (Schol. Aristoph. Av. 925). It is stated that Hiero had given the mules, with which he had won the Pythian victory in question, to his charioteer, who seems to have been one Straton, and Pindar here begs, in a roundabout way, that he will give Straton the chariot also: 'Straton is like a person wandering among the Scythians with horses only, and no chariot to live in.' The point of the application and the parody is evident. As the Scholiast says: "Δῆλον ὅτι χιτῶνα αἰτεῖ πρὸς τῇ σπολάδι." Blaydes adds: "De Scythiis, qui hiberno tempore propter frigoris inclementiam bona sua in plaustra conferentes in aliam regionem migrabant. Vid. Herodot. IV. 11-19; Aeschyl. Prom. 710; Diod. Sic. II. 43. Schol.: 'Ο μὴ ἔχων δὲ ἐκίωσε ἀμαξαν ἄτιμος παρ' αὐτοῖς κρίνεται."

943-948. The poet, grateful for the double gift he has just received, promises to celebrate the "fearful," "chilling" city.

949, 950. πανταγὶ τὰ κρυερά . . . λαβὼν, But you've escaped these chills now you've got a coat.

951, 952. οὐδέποτε' ἤλπισα τοῦτον πεπύσθαι, I never dreamed of this, that this fellow had heard, &c. Here πεπύσθαι represents οὗτος πέπυσται in the oratio recta. G. § 73, 1.

953. σύ. Addressed to the priest, who is now to resume the ceremonies. But before he has had time to get fairly started again, another speculator, a dealer in oracles, appears. "Dicit haec sacerdoti, qui jam sacra denuo auspicaturus silentium imperat (εὐφημία ἔστω: vide Ran. 352, et a B. laudatum Spanh. ad Callim. h. in Apoll. 17), aquam lustralem dispergit et aram circumit; affertur hircus immolandus, cum oraculorum interpres, epularum cupidus, accurrit per medias aves, et eum mactari vetat." Bothe.

954. κατάρξῃ is a religious word, used of the preliminary ceremonies of sacrifices, particularly of plucking the hair from the head of the victim, and burning it upon the altar. Compare μὴ κατάρξῃ with μὴ φέρε in v. 956. G. § 86.

957. Βάκιδος χρησμός, an oracle of Bacis. Bacis was an ancient Boeotian prophet, supposed to have given oracles at Heleon in Boeotia, under the inspiration of the Corycian lymphs. His oracles, some of which are preserved by Herodotus and Pausanias, were in hexameter verse. See, for example, Hdt. VIII. 20, 77. He is mentioned also in the Knights and Peace of Aristophanes. There was a collection of his oracles, like the Sibylline books at Rome. These oracles are here burlesqued, as well as the superstition of consulting soothsayers, like Lampon, for instance, before engaging in any enterprise of moment. The temper of mind which led the Athenians to find some ancient oracle applicable to any remarkable event which happened may be illustrated from Thucydides, in his account of the commencement of the Peloponnesian war. But the disposition exists everywhere among men. Scarcely a day passes without some ancient prediction appearing in the newspapers, by which present events have been foretold. But the whole race of soothsayers, and their tricks and evasions, are mercilessly dealt with more than once by Aristophanes.

959, 960. For πρὶν οἰκίσαι after a negative sentence, see G. § 106, N. 2.

962, 963. λύκοι. Referring to the λυκοφιλία, the wolf-friendship, and intended as a hit at the two Athenians, who are designated by the wolves, that have founded a city with the crows (see ante, ὀρνέαι, Bird-town, which was placed between Corinth and Sicyon), μεταξύ, &c.

966. Πανδώρα, Pandora, i. e. the all-giver. The purpose of the soothsayer being to extort gifts from the founders of the new city, he significantly repeats an oracle commanding them to sacrifice to the all-giver. This is pleasantly brought out in the following lines.

967. ὅς δέ κε. G. § 61, 3. Notice the Epic forms κέ and δόμην (v. 968), as well as the dactylic hexameter.

969. βιβλίον, the book, i. e. the book containing the oracles of Bacis.

970. σπλάγχνων, the entrails, i. e. of the victim about to be offered.

977. ἔξεγραψάμην, I have had copied. Observe the force of the middle voice.

983. Δάμπων, Διοπεΐθης. Both noted soothsayers. The former is mentioned in the Clouds.

987, seq. A new character now arrives in the city. Meton, the celebrated observer and astronomer, who devised the cycle of nineteen years. See Dict. of Antiq., under Calendar. Gr.; also, Fasti Hellenici, p. 304. Meton is also the subject of the jests of Aristophanes elsewhere. See Clouds, 615, seq., and note. The Scholiast says: "Μέτων ἄριστος ἀστρονόμος καὶ γεωμέτρης. Τούτου ἐστὶν ὁ ἐνιαυτὸς ὁ λεγόμενος Μέτωνος. Φησὶ δὲ Καλλίστρατος ἐν Κολωνῷ ἀνάθεμά τι εἶναι αὐτοῦ ἀστρολογικόν. Εὐφρόνιος δέ, ὅτι τῶν δῆμων ἦν ἐκ Κολωνοῦ."

988. τί δράσων (sc. ἦκεῖς); G. § 109, 5.

993. Ἑλλάς ὡς Κολωνός. Besides the explanation of the reference to Colonos, given by the Scholiast, the jest intended is much the same as if, in speaking of some famous personage, we should say of him that he was "known to America and to Hull."

996. πνιγία. The sky is compared to a πνιγεύς, or extinguisher, in the Clouds. See Clouds, 96, and note, with the references there given. The whole passage is made purposely nonsensical.

1000. Ὁ κύκλος τετράγωνος, that the circle may be squared.

1004. Ἄνθρωπος Θαλῆς, The fellow is a Thales.

1007. Ξενηλατοῦνται. Strangers were sometimes driven out in a body from Sparta. The general inhospitality of Sparta is touched upon by Isocrates (Panegyricus), and contrasted with the liberality of Athens.

1009. στασιάσετε; are you at feud?

1010, 1011. Ὅμοθυμαδὸν δοκεῖ, We are of one mind, to thrash all the rascals.

1012, 1013. ὑπάγοιμι τὰρ' ἄν. G. § 52, 2. — Νῆ . . . ἄν, Yes, by Zeus, you had better ; for I don't know whether you could be too quick. — αἰραὶ, they, i. e. the blows.

1015. ἀναμετρήσεις. The word is used, of course, in allusion to Meton's offer to survey and lay out the town. He now orders him to make tracks (ὁδοὺς) in another sense.

1016. πρόξενοι. Boeckh, Public Economy of the Athenians (Book I. Chap. 9), says : "The Greeks tolerated a species of consul in the person of the Proxenus of each state, who was considered as the representative of his country, and was bound to protect the citizens who traded at the place. If, for example, an inhabitant of Heraclea died at any place, the Proxenus of Heraclea was, by virtue of his office, obliged to make inquiries concerning the property which he left behind him. On one occasion, when an inhabitant of Heraclea died at Argos, the Proxenus of Heraclea received his property." Upon the ἐπίσκοποι the same writer says : "As the Spartans had their Harmòsts, so had the Athenians officers named Episcopi (ἐπίσκοποι, φύλακες), as inspectors in the tributary states ; Antiphon had mentioned them in his oration concerning the tribute of the Lindians, but we are not informed whether they were in any way concerned with the collection of the tributes." He afterwards adds, that the Episcopi, who were sent to subject states, received a salary, probably at the cost of the cities over which they presided. See also Dict. of Antiq., Πρόξενος and Ἐπίσκοποι.

1017. κνάμφ, by the bean. Alluding to the mode of appointing certain officers at Athens, beans being used in drawing the lots. For the various modes of election, see Hermann's Political Antiquities, § 148 (formerly § 149). The Episcopus was doubtless represented as an effeminate young fellow, like many individuals employed in diplomacy now-a-days.

1019. Φαῦλον βιβλίον. The βιβλίον is the credentials, or commission,—the certificate of his appointment, or perhaps his official instructions. Teleas, the person mentioned under that name in v. 169, is here represented as the archon, or magistrate in whose department fell the public business of the Birds. Φαῦλον is applied to the document, because it sent him away from the city, where he might have made a figure in the courts and the assembly.

1021. Μὴ πράγματ' ἔχειν, not to get into trouble.

1023. Φαρνάκη. A satirical allusion to the intrigues frequently carried on between the Greek states and the Persian court. Pharnaces was the name of a Persian satrap. The kind of intrigues here alluded to is described in Xenophon's Hellenica, and referred to in the discourses of Isocrates.

1024. οὔτοσί, this, giving him a blow.

1027. τὰ κάδω, the two urns; i. e. the urns used in the courts and assemblies for casting the votes for and against a person or a measure. The Episcopus has come provided with the apparatus necessary for organizing judicial and political proceedings on the Athenian model; but on receiving the sort of pay which Peisthetairos gives him, he makes off.

The next character who appears upon the scene is a vender of decrees and resolutions. He comes in reading one of them, dressed out in all the formalities of Athenian legislation.

1034. πωλήσων, for the purpose of selling. G. § 109, 5. The object of the psephism is to require the Nephelococcygians, as being an Athenian colony, founded by two Athenian citizens, to use the same weights and measures with the Athenians. But, instead of mentioning the name of Athens, he inserts the Olophyxians, an insignificant dependency of Athens in Thrace.

1038. ὀποτύξιοι, i. e. οἱ ὀποτύξιοι. A ludicrous name, formed from ὀποτύξω, to lament, in imitation of the name of the Olophyxians. As if the decree ran, "All Californians shall use the same weights and measures with the Greenlanders;" and Peisthetairos replied, "But you shall speedily use the same with the Groanlanders."

1041. Καλοῦμαι, &c., I summon Peisthetairos for the month Munychion, to answer for outrage. For the forms of summoning, see Clouds, v. 495, and note. The γραφή ὕβρεως was an action specifically provided for in Attic law. See Meier and Schömann's Attic Process, Book III. 1, Chap. 2, § 5. The month Munychion (April) was the month in which cases between Athenians and foreigners came up for trial, that being the time when strangers, and particularly deputies from the tributary states, were present in Athens to pay the annual tax.

1045. στήλην. A στήλη was a column set up in some public place, on which were engraved laws, treaties, decrees, and other documents of public concern. According to the column is, then, according to law.

1047. γράφω δραχμάς, I lay the damages at ten thousand drachmas. The γραφή ὕβρεως was one of the actions technically called ἀγῶνες τιμητοί, i. e. cases in which the court had to decide the penalty. But, in so doing, the prosecutor was required to fix his estimate of the crime, and the other party, when found guilty, also was called upon to do the same. The question to be decided by the court was, which of the two estimates should be adopted as a legal sentence. See Notes to Kennedy's Demosthenes; Meier and Schömann, Book III., Introd. § 2.

1049. τῆς στήλης κατετίλας. "Quod nefarium erat. Sic κατατιλῶν τῶν Ἐκαταίων in Ran. 364. Videtur respicere poeta ad Alcibiadis accusationem de Hermis mutilandis, quod etiam noctu evenisse testatur Thucyd. VI. 27." Blaydes.

1050. Οὔτος. The priest, apparently out of patience with the numerous delays, is starting to go away and offer his sacrifice in some more quiet place. This is addressed to him as he turns to depart. Peisthetairos and the others follow him, leaving the Chorus alone. Bergler, however, remarks: "Excusationem hanc faciunt intus sacrificandi, ne hircus immoletur. In Pac. 1021, Trygaeus ingenue id fatetur: —

'Αλλ' εἴσω φέρων,

Θύσας τὰ μηρί' ἐξελὼν δεῦρ' ἔκφερε·

Χοῦτω τὸ πρόβατον τῇ χορηγῇ σώζεται."

Upon this, the Chorus sings a song of exultation in the pride of their new-found dignities, looking forward to the honors which their exalted position and great services are to bring them. While they are thus employed, the sacrificial rites are elsewhere performing; and at the close of the chorus, the official personages return, announcing that all the auspices are favorable.

1053. παντόπτε. In this and the following lines, the birds now assume the dignity, attributes, and epithets of the gods.

1059–1061. οἱ ἀποβόσκειται. The construction is this: the relative οἱ refers to Θηρῶν, and has for its verb ἀποβόσκονται, to be supplied from ἀποβόσκειται; ἰφεζόμενα applies to the insects which consume the fruits of the trees, and which are devoured by the birds.

1067. Διαγόραν. Diagoras, the Melian, is often alluded to as an atheist. Lysias, in the oration against Andocides, mentions a price having been set upon his head, on account of his having thrown ridicule upon the religion of the Athenians. In the Clouds, Socrates is called the Melian, for the purpose of casting reproach or ridicule upon him, by connecting his name with the doctrines of the Melian unbeliever. For an excellent and candid account of this person, see the article in Smith's Dict. of Greek and Roman Biography.

1068, 1069. This is intended as a pleasant satire upon the Athenian exaggerations in expressing their hatred of tyranny, and the affectation of the orators of excessive zeal for the democracy. Here is an offer of a talent for any one who shall kill any of the dead tyrants. Blaydes thinks the poet alludes indirectly to the mutilators of the Hermae, the Hermocopidae, who were regarded by the Athenians in the light of tyrants, and for killing whom a reward was offered. (See Thucydides, VI. 61.) In imitation of these Attic proclamations, the Chorus proceeds forthwith to offer rewards for slaying certain persons who may be considered the natural enemies of the republic of the birds. Philocrates is the poulterer mentioned early in the play. Στρούθιον is formed, in imitation of gentile names, from στρούθος, a sparrow.

1073. σπίνους. Probably a species of ortolan, a small bird sold in the market of Athens. Perhaps the Emberiza caesia. See Von der Mühle, p. 40.

1074. κίχλας, thrushes. The Turdus musicus probably; it is still called in Greece τζήχλα.

1075. κοψίχοισιν. See vv. 308 and 806. Usually called the blackbird, but very different from the English or American bird known under that name. It is the Turdus merula, still called in Greece κοτζιφόε. See Von der Mühle, p. 63.

1076. εἶρξος ἔχει. G. § 112, N. 7.

1077. παλεύειν, to decoy. The Scholiast says: "Θηρεύειν, προκαλείσθαι. Εἰώθασιν ἐκτυφλοῦντ' ἑ τινα τῶν ὀρνέων ἰσθάναι ἐν δικτύῳ, ὅπως τῇ φωνῇ προσκαλοῖτο τὰ ὁμοιογενῆ." Decoy-birds were called by the Greeks παλεύτριοι.

In the antistrophe, other privileges of the birds are very poetically set forth.

1089. ἀχέρας, the chirper, is the τέττιξ, or cicada, which delights in the sunshine (ἡλιομανής, sun-mad).

1093, 1094. παρθένια . . . κηπεύματα, delicate, rich, white myrtle-berries, and fruits that grow in the gardens of the Graces, i. e. the sweetest and most delicious. The Scholiast thinks the epithet παρθένια was applied to myrtle-berries because maidens were fond of eating them.

The lines that follow form a parabasis, or address to the audience, in which the poet makes the Chorus his mouth-piece, and communicates through it his opinions, wishes, or feelings to the public. The judges are those appointed to decide upon the merits of the rival pieces. See Clouds, vv. 518, seq. For the peculiarities of a parabasis, see Munk's Metres, p. 336, to which may be added the following extract from Müller's History of Greek Literature:—"It was not originally a constituent part of comedy, but improved and worked out according to rules of art. The chorus, which up to that point had kept its place between the thymele and the stage, and had stood with its face to the stage, made an evolution, and proceeded in files towards the theatre, in the narrower sense of the word; that is, towards the place of the spectators. This is the proper parabasis, which usually consisted of anapaestic tetrameters, occasionally mixed up with other long verses; it began with a short opening song (in anapaestic or trochaic verse), which was called kommation, and ended with a very long and protracted anapaestic system, which, from its trial of the breath, was called pnigos (also makron). In this parabasis the poet makes his chorus speak of his own poetical affairs, of the object and end of his productions, of his services to the state, of his relation to his rivals, and so forth. If the parabasis is complete, in the wider sense of the word, this is followed by a second piece, which is properly the main point, and to which the anapaests only serve as an introduction. The chorus, namely, sings a lyrical poem, generally a song of praise in honor of some god, and then recites, in trochaic verses (of which there should, regularly, be sixteen), some joking complaint, some reproach against the city, some witty sally against the people, with more or less reference to the leading subject of the play: this is called the epirrhema, or 'what is said in addition.' Both pieces, the lyrical strophe and the epirrhema, are repeated antistrophically. It is clear that the lyrical piece, with its antistrophe, arose from the phallic song; and the epirrhema, with its antepirrhema, from the gibes with which the chorus of revellers assailed the first persons they met. It was natural, as the parabasis came in the middle of the whole comedy, that, instead of these jests directed against individuals, a conception more significant and more interesting to the public at large should be substituted for them; while the gibes against individuals, suitable to the original nature of comedy, though without any reference to the connection of the piece, might be put in the mouth of the chorus whenever occasion served.

"As the parabasis completely interrupts the action of the comic drama, it could only be introduced at some especial pause; we find that Aristophanes is fond of introducing it at the point where the action, after all sorts of hindrances and delays, has got so far that the crisis must ensue, and it must be determined whether the end desired will be attained or not. Such, however, is the laxity with which comedy treats all these forms, that the parabasis may even be divided into two parts, and the anapaestical introduction be separated from the choral song; there may even be a second parabasis (but without the anapaestic march), in order to mark a second transition in the action of the piece."

1096. κρίνωσιν ἡμᾶς, adjudge us victors. Supply νικᾶν.

1097. Ἀλεξάνδρου, Paris; who, being appointed judge of beauty between the rival goddesses, received from Aphrodite, to whom he had adjudged the palm, the gift of Helen.

1099. Γλαῦκες Λαυριωτικαί, Laurian owls, i. e. coins bearing the figure of an owl. See note to v. 303. Laurian, because the Attic coinage was supplied from the silver mines of Laurion, for an account of which see Boeckh's Public Economy of the Athenians, Book III. Chap. 3. See also Herodotus, VII. 144; Thucyd. III. 55. The Laurian owls are to make their nests in the purses of the judges, and hatch small change.

1103. ἐρέψομεν πρὸς ἀετὸν. There is a play upon the word ἀετὸν, which, besides signifying an eagle, is also an architectural term, like ἀέτωμα, the pediment.

1104. ἀρχιδίον, a petty office.

1106. πηρογῶνας, birds' crops.

1107. ἦν δὲ μὴ κρίνητε (sc. ἡμᾶς νικᾶν). See v. 1096. — χαλκείεσθε is Imperative middle. — Μηνίσκοι were crescent-shaped coverings, to protect the statues from being soiled by the birds. The rainbow, or glory, encircling the heads of saints in Christian statuary and painting, was borrowed from the custom of the Greek artists of placing these crescents over their statues. — φορεῖν. G. § 97. The chorus tells them that they had better make themselves bronze μηνίσκοι to wear.

1108. ὅς ἂν μὴ ἔχῃ = εἴαν τις μὴ μὴν' ἔχῃ. G. § 60; § 61, 3.

Peisthetairos, having completed the sacrifices, reappears upon the scene, and at the same moment a messenger hurries in, out of breath, to announce the completion of the city wall.

1113. ὅτου πευσόμεθα. G. § 65, 1.

1114. Ἀλφειὸν πνέων, breathing Alpheus. The allusion is to the races at Olympia, near the banks of the Alpheus.

1116. ἄρχων = ὁ ἄρχων.

1119. Προξενίδης ὁ Κομπασεύς, Proxenides of Braggtown. The person here referred to as a braggart is spoken of also in the Wasps. Κομπασεύς, formed from κόμπος, as if there were a deme bearing that name. Carey translates it of Bragland. For Theagenes, see ante, v. 824. For δν, see G. § 42, 3.

1120-1122. ἄρματε παρελασαίτην, might drive two chariots past each other, with horses harnessed as large as the Wooden; alluding to the δούριος or δουράτιος ἵππος, in the capture of Troy. The allusion was the more amusing to the audience, from the circumstance that a brazen statue of the Trojan horse stood on the Acropolis, perhaps in full sight of the theatre.

1124. τοῦ μάκρους, genitive of exclamation.

1126. Αἰγύπτιος. "Πλινθοφόρος. Οἱ Αἰγύπτιοι ἐκωμωδοῦντο ὡς ἀχθοφόροι. Καὶ ἐν Βατράχοις (1332), οὗς οὐκ ἄραιντ' ἄν [ἄν ἄραιντ'] οὐδ' ἐκατὸν Αἰγύπτιοι.—Sch. notum est ex Herodoti Euterpe, ut plerique reges assidue coëgerint eos caementa portare ad exstruendas praecipue pyramides." Bergler. The labors of the Egyptians in building the Pyramids are referred to, a full account of which is given by Herodotus, Lib. II. 124, seqq. The reader will also remember the tasks imposed upon the Israelites during their enslavement in Egypt.

1130. λίθους. Perhaps the common notion, that the cranes carried in their beaks, or swallowed, stones, to steady themselves in their flight,—a notion which Aristotle remarks upon in his History of Animals,—may have arisen from observing that some birds swallow gravel as a kind of digester. It appears in several forms in the Scholiasts. One story is, that the cranes carry stones, so that, when wearied with flying, they may ascertain by dropping one whether they are over land or water. At any rate, this popular error is very happily employed by the poet in the present passage.

1131. κρίκες, the rails. The species here intended is the Rallus aquaticus, described by Von der Mühle as being very abundant in the moors of Greece, pp. 91, 92. The other birds here mentioned have already occurred.

1138. ὑποτύπτοντες, spading; i. e. the geese used their web-feet as spades to shovel the cement into the hods of the herons.

1141. περιζωσμένοι. "Præcinctas eas esse facete fingit comicus, quia hujus avis plumarum dispositio albae zonae speciem refert." Blaydes. The Scholiast makes a similar remark: "Τινὲς τῶν νησσῶν ἔχουσιν ὡς ζωνὴν ἐν κύκλῳ λευκῇ." Probably the Anas boschas. (See Von der Mühle, p. 126.) Bothe quotes from Wilmsen part of a description of this wild duck: "In front, on the under part of its neck, there is a white semicircle."

The scene described by the messenger I conceive to be this,—and the humor of it consists in the ingenious adaptation to the habits of the birds of the parts they perform in the building of the new city. The herons, geese, and ducks, not being good flyers, are the diggers and carriers. The geese, with their web-feet, remain in the mud, shovelling it upon the broad bills of the herons, which are the hods (Δεκάνας). The herons do not carry it to the city, for their haunts are in muddy places, but hand it over to the swallows, who are the best and swiftest of all upon the wing, and who carry it up to the city in their beaks, and then work it over as described in the following note. The additional fact that the swallow, when building its own nest, picks up mud only after rains, makes the division of labor natural and necessary. In this way the busy builders readily and easily accomplish their work.

1142—1144. ἄνω . . . χελιδόνες, and the swallows flew up with the trowel behind them, like little boys, and carrying the cement in their mouths. The swallows are selected for this office on account of their skill in lining their nests with mud. The trowel is the swallow's tail, which bears some resemblance to the broad, flat trowel used by the ancient masons. Besides this, the poet had observed that the swallow uses its tail for the very purpose that a mason uses his trowel. It also carries the mud in its beak, as here represented; like little boys, "ut pueruli," as explained by Blaydes, "qui gaudent aliquid a tergo trahere, et baculo ligneo equi instar insidentes cruribus divaricatis currere." Something is wanting to make the grammatical construction of the text complete; as it stands now, there is an asyndeton.

1156. Ἀπονίσσομαι, I'll wash myself. He had come in great haste, and was still covered with dirt.

1157. Οὔτος. Addressed to Peisthetairos, who stands in silent amazement at what he has just heard.

1162. πυρρίχην βλέπων. The allusion is to a war-dance, called the pyrrhic, — looking full of fight; like φόνον βλέπων, Aesch. Sept. 478, and Ἄρη δεδορκότων, Id. 53.

The second messenger now comes running in, out of breath. Some one has passed through the gates without permission of the authorities.

1170. οὐκ οὖν ἐχρὴν πέμψαι; ought they not to have sent? G. § 49, 2, N. 3. A protasis is implied, if they had done their duty, or something similar. περιπόλους. The young men of Athens were classed under the designation of ἐφηβοί, when they reached the age of eighteen. The two following years they were sent to the frontiers to guard the strongholds and military posts, and for the general protection of the Attic territory. During this period they were called περίπολοι, or roamers. The allusion and application here are obvious. See Hermann, Polit. Antiq. § 121 (formerly 123).

1171 – 1174. The περίπολοι, who are sent in pursuit, are the swiftest and strongest of the birds of prey; all with crooked talons, — the hawks, falcons, vultures, carrion-crows, and eagles. All the birds here mentioned are described by Von der Mühle. The tumult in the air is doubtless a parody on a passage in some play; very likely one of Aeschylus.

After a few strains of lyric verse, Iris, the messenger of the gods, is brought. She is the interloper, who, being sent on an embassy to the earth, has rashly entered the city, and now appears in the august presence of Peisthetairos.

1179, 1180. χάρει πᾶς. G. § 84, N. 2.

1190. λέγειν ἔχρην, you ought to tell. (See v. 1170.) G. § 49, 2, N. 3.

1192. πλοῖον, ἢ κυνῇ; Blaydes has the following note: "Navis an petasus? Navem esse eam putat, aut quia vestis ejus, impetu volandi veli instar sinuosa facta erat, aut propter alas quas habebat; habent enim et naves quasi alas quasdam remos: petasum eam pōtat propter alas vel pinnas." But perhaps the best illustration of the text is the passage in Milton's Samson Agonistes, where the appearance of Dalilah is described:—

"But who is this? what thing of sea or land?

Female of sex it seems,

That so bedecked, ornate, and gay,

Comes this way sailing,

Like a stately ship

Of Tarsus, bound for the isles

Of Javan or Gadire,

With all her bravery on, and tackle trim,

Sails filled, and streamers waving."

1193. Πάραλος, ἢ Σαλαμινία; For an account of these fast-sailing public vessels of the Athenians, see note to vv. 146, 147.

1196. οἰμώξει. G. § 25, N. 5.

1201. κολοιάρχους. "Praefectos excubiarum. Κολοιοῖς enim custodia novae urbis commissa erat." Blaydes. See v. 1167.

1202. Σφραγὶς. Lit. the seal, i. e. the passport, which, it seems, was employed in ancient times, stamped with the official seal of the proper authorities. See Becker's Charicles, Note 15 to Scene I., and the authorities there quoted.

1204. Ἐπίβαλεν, tendered.

1211. Ἰριδῶν, genitive after δικαιοσύνη.

1215, 1216. εἰ belongs to ἀρχομεν, and also to ἀκολασταίητε and γνῶσεσθε, as is shown by the use of μέν and δέ. G. § 54, Remark.

1217. Ἀκροατέον . . . κρείττων, You have got to obey your betters in turn. G. § 114, 2. (See v. 1226.)

1218. ναυστολεῖς. The idea of the ship is still kept up.

1220. Φράσσουσα θύειν, to bid them sacrifice. Fut. part, expressing purpose. The sacrificial forms, in the following lines, are borrowed from the religious rites of the Athenians.

1224. Θεοὶ γάρ. The use of the particle here is elliptical, and it may be rendered, What! are you —, and, in the next clause, To be sure, for —.

1226. Ἀντίον αὐτοῖς. The verbal in τέον is equivalent in sense to the infinitive with δεῖ; here, then, = δεῖ θύειν αὐτοῖς, it is their duty to sacrifice. The construction is ad sensum, since verbals usually take the dative of the agent. (See v. 1217.) G. § 114, 2.

1228, 1229. The language here is a parody upon Aeschylus, Agam. 525, 526: —

Τροίαν κατασκάψαντα τοῦ δικηφόρον
Διὸς μακέλλῃ, τῇ κατείργασται πέδον.

1231. Λικυμνιαὶ βολαῖς, with Likymnian bolts. The allusion is to a lost play of Euripides, called Likymnios, in which one of the personages was struck by a thunderbolt. The whole speech of Iris is an amusing parody on the obligato loftiness of the tragic style.

1233. Ἀνδόν, Φρύγα. Here is a parody upon some lines

1236, 1237. δόμους Ἀμφίονος . . . ἀετοῖς. This passage is borrowed from the Niobe of Aeschylus. See Nauck, Frag. No. 155.

1238. πορφυρίωνας. See ante, vv. 553, 709.

1239. παρδαλᾶς, panther-skins; in allusion to the coloring of their plumage.

1246. διὰρράγεις. See note to v. 2.

1257, seq. The herald who had been despatched to earth now returns, exulting at the brilliant success Birdtown has had among mortals.

1259. κατακέλευσον. According to the Scholiast, this means order silence. Cary renders it, "O, bid all here give hearing." Properly, it is used of the κελευστής, "whose business it was," says Arnold (Thucyd. II. 84, note), "to make the rowers keep time by singing to them a tune or boat-song; and also to cheer them to their work, and encourage them by speaking to them." "It was also," according to a Scholiast on the Acharnians, "the business of the κελευστής to see that the men baked their bread, and contributed their fair share to the mess, that none of the rations issued to each man might be disposed of improperly." The word is doubtless used here in allusion to these functions of the κελευστής. The fashions of Birdtown are all the rage at Athens, and multitudes are on the point of migrating thither. Under these circumstances, it will be necessary that some one should exert himself to keep order among such a miscellaneous crew, and that one must be Peisthetairos. Translate, then, issue orders.

1260, 1261. Στεφάνῳ χρυσῷ. One of the most noted among the honors bestowed for eminent public services was the conferring of a golden crown. Perhaps this is the best known from the fact, that the great contest of oratory between Demosthenes and Aeschines grew out of a proposition to crown the former.

1267, seq. Ἑλακωνομένων, were Spartan-mad. This affectation of imitating the Lacedaemonian modes of life, ways of speaking, and manners, seems at times to have been pretty extensively prevalent at Athens, and is often spoken of the ancients. See Plutarch, Life of Alcibiades, Chap. 23, τῇ διαίτῃ λακωνίζων; Demosthenes against Conon, p. 1267, 22, ἐσκυθρωπάκασι καὶ λακωνίζειν φασί; and Plato, Protag. 342 B, Gorg. 515 E. The particular modes in which the affectation manifested itself are described in the lines which follow. With respect to the whims charged upon Socrates, see the Clouds, passim.

1269. Σκυτάλι' ἐφόρου, carried Spartan canes. The allusion here is to the scytale, by means of which the government of Sparta corresponded with the generals or kings when absent on some foreign enterprise. Smith (Dict. of Gr. and Rom. Ant.) thus briefly describes it:—"When a king or general left Sparta, the ephors gave to him a staff of a definite length and thickness, and retained for themselves another of precisely the same size. When they had any communications to make to him, they cut the material upon which they intended to write into the shape of a narrow ribbon, wound it round their staff, and then wrote upon it the message which they had to send to him. When the strip of writing material was taken from the staff, nothing but single letters appeared, and in this state the strip was sent to the general, who, after having wound it round his staff, was able to read the communication."

1273. νομόν. There is a play upon the double meaning νομός, pasture, and νόμος, law.

1274. κατήραν ἐς τὰ βιβλία. Here again is a play upon the word βιβλίον, which naturally suggests the βίβλος, or papyrus plant. καταίρειν is to come ashore, to land; translate, they would land, or alight, upon the leaves, meaning, they flew at once to the law cases. For κατήραν ἄν, see G. § 30, 2. "The whole of this," as Cary remarks: "is intended to represent the eagerness of the Athenians for legislation and law disputes; a never-failing topic of ridicule with Aristophanes."

The reasons why the poet attaches names of birds to certain individuals cannot, in all these cases, be certainly made out. Doubtless there were personal peculiarities belonging to all these individuals, which gave the application a point highly amusing to the audience who were familiar with them.

1278. Πέρδιξ. According to the Scholiast, this was the name of a lame innkeeper; but the poet pretends it was given him on account of his craft and dishonesty.

1279. Μενίππῳ. Menippus, of whom nothing is known, was called the swallow, probably on account of some imperfection of speech; since the Greeks compared such defects to the twittering of swallows. See Agamemnon of Aeschylus, v. 974. The Scholiast has another explanation, quite too far-fetched.

1280. κόραξ. The one-eyed Opuntius was called the crow, according to the Scholiast, because he had a large, beak-shaped nose.

1281. Κορυδός. Philocles was called the tufted lark, on account of the peculiar shape of his head, as the Scholiast says. He is elsewhere mentioned as deformed (see Thesm. 168), "Αἰσχρὸς ὃν αἰσχρῶς ποιεῖ." Probably there is also some allusion to the debauched character of Philocles.—

χρηλώπηξ. The nickname of goose-fox is given to Theagenes on account of his rogueries. The same person has been mentioned before.

1282. Ἴβις. Lycurgus (not the orator of that name) is said to have been called the Ibis, either on account of his having been born in Egypt, or because he had lived there. Pherecrates, as quoted by the Scholiast, called the Egyptians the countrymen of Lycurgus. It is quite as likely, however, to have been some peculiarity of his personal appearance, — as the length and small size of his legs, — which suggested the nickname. This is the view adopted by Blaydes. — ρυκρέπις. Chairephon is the well-known disciple of Socrates, mentioned often by Plato and Xenophon, and ridiculed in the Clouds. He was called the Bat, on account of his dark color, melancholy temperament, and thin voice.

1283. κίττα. Syracusius is said to have been a prating orator, hanging about the bema, and seizing every opportunity to harangue the people. So he is compared to the pigeon, sitting and cooing upon the roof-tree.

1284. Ὀρνυξ. Meidias was called the Ortux, or quail, because he was like a quail struck in the head by a gamester. The allusion here is to a play called ὀρνυγοκopia, or quail-striking, which is described by Pollux. The gamesters themselves were called ὀρνυγοκόποι, or στυφοκόποι. The sport consisted in throwing or striking at a quail, set up as a mark, and perhaps was not unlike the shooting-matches of our day. See Becker's Charicles, Scene V., note 6; Julius Pollux, VII. 136; Meursius, De Ludis Graecorum, ὀρνυγοκopia. Meidias is supposed by Blaydes to have been called a quail because he was a gamester and cock-fighter. But it is more likely, I think, from the turn of the phrase here, that the point of resemblance was some singularity in the shape of the head. The Scholiast, how-

1287. χελιδὼν ἐμπεποιημένη, a swallow introduced into poetry, as in the swallow-song of Simonides.

1294. Οὐκ ἐστάναι, It is not, then, our business longer to stand. ἔργον is used here just as ὥρα is in other places. Peisthetairos, hearing that so many emigrants are to come to his new city, orders that Manes, a servant, shall bring baskets and boxes full of all kinds of wings, with which to furnish the new-comers. A short dialogue between Peisthetairos and the Chorus sets forth the blessings that belong to the Nephelococcygians.

1301. προσείη. G. § 82.

1305. μετοικεῖν, to live as a μέτοικος or resident foreigner. The μέτοικοι at Athens formed a large class, chiefly of tradespeople, who enjoyed certain rights in return for their μετοίκιον, or annual fee to the state of twelve drachmas. According to Boeckh (Public Economy of the Athenians, Book I. Chap. VII.) the μέτοικοι with their families amounted to about 45,000, or to nearly half the number of the free Athenians.

1312. Σὺ. Addressed to Peisthetairos.

1316. Σὺ δ'. Again addressed to Peisthetairos.

1317-1320. Διάθες περῶσεις, Arrange them (the wings) in order; the singing ones by themselves, and the prophetic, and aquatic. Then, see that you wing each man, wisely looking to his character. Blaydes says: "μουσικά, ut cycni, lusciniæ, &c.; μαντικά, ut corvi, aquilæ et reliquarum avium, ex quibus omina capiuntur; θαλάττια, ut mergi, lari, ossifragæ."

1321. σοῦ, you, i. e. Manes.

The scene that follows is amusing, and closely related, as are all the scenes in Aristophanes, to the peculiarities of Hellenic society. The three personages, Parricide, Kinesias, and Sycophant, who arrive in succession, each with his characteristic purposes, and all singing in lofty dithyrambic strains, at once embody the deepest satire on the private and political vices of the times, and throw the gayest ridicule upon the empty verbosity of the popular poets.

1323. γενοίμαν. G. § 82.

1324. ὡς ἄν. G. § 44, 1, N. 3 (b).

1327. ἄιδων ἀετούς, singing of eagles.

1329. τοῦ πέτεσθαι. G. § 95, 1.

1337. ὅς ἂν πεπλήγη. G. § 18, 1.

1340, seq. Peisthetairos quotes to the Parricide the law of the storks, because, says Blaydes, "inter ciconias et pullos earum summus existit amor."

1341. κύρβειν. The κύρβεις were columns on which laws were published, especially those which contained the laws of Solon, and which were also called ἀξόνες. See Plut. Sol. 25. See Clouds, v. 448, and note.

1344. πάλιν, in turn.

1345, 1346. Ἀπέλυσσα βοσκητέον, it would be a deal of good, by Zeus, that I got by coming here, if I must feed my father, too.

1348. ὄρνιν ὀρφανόν, "Tanquam avem orbam, quae non patrem alendum habeat." Blaydes.

1349. οὐ ὑποθήσομαι, I'll suggest a good thing. οὐ κακῶς is used exactly like the French pas mal.

1350 - 1356. The plan of Peisthetairos is to arm the Parricide like a fighting bird, with wing, and spur, and crest, and send him off to Thrace, bidding him to enlist in that service, to support himself by his pay, and let his father live. The sending him to Thrace is an allusion to the numerous expeditions which the Athenians sent for a series of years into the North, to act against the Macedonians and the Lacedaemonians. See Thirlwall's History of Greece, Vols. III. and IV.; Thucyd. IV. 75, seq.; Grote, Vol. IV.

1359. The poet Kinesias, who is satirized in the Clouds also, now makes his appearance, singing appropriate strains. He was a dithyrambic poet, of no great ability, but one of the corrupters of the poetical and musical style of the time. Besides this, according to Athenaeus, he was so tall and thin, that he was obliged to wear stays made of linden-wood. To this the epithet φιλύρινον, v. 1363, refers. His life was dishonored by gross impiety and low vices.

1364. τί κυκλείς; κυκλεῖν πόδα is a tragic expression, occurring in Euripides, Orest. 632. Kinesias is said to have been lame. κύκλον also refers to his Cyclic compositions. Translate, Why dost thou turn thy halting foot hitherward?

1367. Παῦσαι μοι, Cease your singing, and tell me what you mean. Give up poetry, and let us have prose and decency. G. § 112, 1.

1370. ἀναβολάς, preludes. All this is in ridicule of the frigid bombast of the dithyrambic poets.

1375. κλύων. § 109, 6; § 52, 1.

1376. Οὐ δὴτ' ἔγωγε, Not I, in faith. To which Kinesias replies, Yes, you shall too, by Hercules.

1381. Ὡόπ. The Scholiast explains this as a cry to stop the rowing of the oarsmen. But it is elsewhere used to encourage and stimulate them. — ἀλάδρομον ἀλάμενος, having leaped the sea-course. Blaydes very justly remarks of this and what follows: "Obscuritatem dithyrambicorum irridet poeta, qui constructionibus verborum obscuris et figuris exquisitis gaudent."

1386. Ἀλίμενον τέμνων, cutting the harborless furrow of the air. "Mira et audacissima metaphorarum conjunctio, more dithyrambicorum." Blaydes.

1389, 1390. Ταυτὶ αἰεί; These lines refer to the arrangements for the poetical and musical festivities. The tribes rivalled each other in the splendor of their preparations for the dithyrambic, tragic, and comic contests. Kinesias represents himself as an object of contention to the tribes, as a trainer of the Cyclic chorus.

1392. Λεωτροφίδη, for Leotrophides, i. e. as choregus. The choregus was the individual whose turn it was to furnish the entertainment. He is said to have been a person of a very slight figure, for which reason the poet makes him a citizen of Nephelococcygia. He is mentioned in a fragment of the comic poet Hermippus, preserved by Athenaeus. Bothe gives a different interpretation, — Will you stay here with us, and train a chorus of birds, light as Leotrophides.

1393. Κεκροπίδα φυλήν. Blaydes discusses the question why the poet names the tribe Κεκροπίς. He thinks it is partly because Leotrophides belonged to that tribe, and partly in the way of a punning allusion to the bird κρέκα, as if he had said κρεκοπίδα φυλήν, and suggests that this may be the true reading. There is a question of construction which the commentators have not touched, namely, that of the accusative φυλήν. It seems to me to be in apposition with χορόν; the Chorus then is the Cecropid tribe. And why the Cecropid tribe? First, one of the tribes of Athens bore this name; and secondly, there is a play on the word, as the Athenians themselves were called Cecropians, from King Cecrops. The chorus of flying birds, then, is nothing more than a satirical description of the Athenians, who are elsewhere ridiculed for their levity and fickleness by similar comparisons to birds.

1395. πρὶν ἂν διαδράμω. G. § 67, 1.

1396. The Sycophant now makes his appearance, complaining that the winged birds have nothing. "Συκοφάντης," says Smith (Dict. of Antiq.), "in the time of Aristophanes and Demosthenes, designated a person of a peculiar class, not capable of being described by any single word in our language, but well understood and appreciated by an Athenian. He had not much in common with our sycophant, but was a happy compound of the common barretor, informer, pettifogger, busybody, rogue, liar, and slanderer. The Athenian law permitted any citizen (τὸν βουλόμενον) to give information against public offenders, and prosecute them in courts of justice. It was the policy of the legislature to encourage the detection of crime, and a reward (such as half the penalty) was frequently given to the successful accuser. Such a power, with such a temptation, was likely to be abused, unless checked by the force of public opinion, or the vigilance of the judicial tribunals. Unfortunately, the character of the Athenian democracy, and the temper of the judges, furnished additional incentives to the informer. Eminent statesmen, orators, generals, magistrates, and all persons of wealth and influence, were regarded with jealousy by the people. The more causes came into court, the more fees accrued to the judges, and fines and confiscation enriched the public treasury. The prosecutor, therefore, in public causes, as well as the plaintiff in civil, was looked on with a more favorable eye than the defendant, and the chances of success made the employment a lucrative one."

1405. πτερῶν πτερῶν δεῖ. Παρὰ τὰ Αἰσχύλου ἐκ Μυρμιδόνων, "ὄπλων ὄπλων δεῖ." Schol. See fragments of the Myrmidons of Aeschylus, No. 136 (Nauck).

1406. Πελλήνης. A city of Achaia, where cloths of peculiar excellence were manufactured. The idea of going to Pellene is suggested by the shabby garments of the informer.

1407. κλητήρ νησιωτικός, an island summoner. Many classes of lawsuits the inhabitants of the islands and the confederated cities were obliged to bring up for adjudication in the courts of Athens. For κλητήρ, see note on v. 146.

1409. πραγματοδίφης, a hunter-up of lawsuits.

1410. καλούμενος, summoning to court.

1411. Ὑπὸ πτερίγων . . . σοφώτερον; Like the expression ὑπ' αὐλητήρος, cited by the Scholiast from Archilochus. Do you serve summonses any wiser on account of wings?

1414. ἔρματος, ballast. This alludes to the notion, that the cranes swallow stones to steady themselves in their flight. See ante. — δίκας, law cases. He compares himself, returning from a tour among the islands and cities with a long list of cases to be tried at Athens, to the cranes laden with a ballast of stones.

1417. τί πάθω; Yes, to be sure, for what would become of me? G. § 88, N. 2. — σκάπτειν οὐκ ἐπίσταμαι, I know not how to dig. Blaydes appropriately quotes Luc. Evang. xvi. 3: "Σκάπτειν οὐκ ἰσχύω, ἐπαιτεῖν αἰσχύνομαι," I cannot dig, to beg I am ashamed.

1418. ἔργα σώφρονα, honest callings.

1419. ἄνδρα τοσούτονί, a man of such an age.

1422. λέγων. Participle expressing the means. G. § 109, 2.

1426. κουρείους, the barbers' shops, which were the lounging-places of the idle and gossiping, called by Theophrastus "symposia without wine." See Becker's Charicles, Excursus III. to Scene XI.

1427, 1428. Δεινῶς . . . ἱππηλατεῖν, Diitrephes has dread- fully set my boy on the wing for horse-driving, by his talk. The person here mentioned has already been alluded to as having made a fortune. The passion for horses naturally led to extravagant expenditure among the fashionable young fellows at Athens. See Clouds, v. 74.

1429, 1430. 'Ο δέ . . . φένας, And another says, that his son is set on the wing and is all of a flutter in his mind for tragedy.

1436. Δαί always expresses surprise or indignation, in a question. What the deuce will you do? — οὐ καταισχνῶ, I will not dishonor my race, as the money-changer says in the Clouds. The phrase seems to have grown so trite, that it had become slang.

1439. ὡς ἄν. G. § 44, 1, N. 2.

1440. Καλεσάμενος, ἐγκεκληκώς. The former means having summoned to appear in court on a certain day; the latter here means having brought a suit against. According to Meier and Schömann (Attic Process, Book IV. Cap. 2), ἐγκαλεῖν means strictly to call upon one's opponent for restitution or satisfaction in the presence of witnesses, and refers to a ceremony which usually preceded the formal summons (πρόσκλησις); the term seems, however, to be used also in a general sense (as here), meaning simply to bring a suit. See note to v. 147.

1442, 1443. ὅπως . . . ξένος, that the stranger may have lost his suit before arriving here, i. e. by his failure to appear on the appointed day, the suit would go against him by default. Ἐρήμην δίκην ὀφλεῖν (or simply ἐρήμην ὀφλεῖν) was the phrase in Attic law, signifying to lose a suit by default; while ἐρήμην δίκην ἐλεῖν (or ἐρήμην ἐλεῖν) meant to gain a case through the absence of one's opponent. The advantage which the Sycophant expects to gain by his wings is, that the unfortunate party against whom the suit is commenced will be unable to equal his rapid mode of doing business. — δπως δν. See ὡς δν, v. 1439.—For the Perfect Subjunctive ὠφλήκη, see G. § 18, 1.

1446. Βέμβικος, a whirligig, or top.

1448. Κορκυραῖα πτερά. The Corcyrean wings are whips from Corcyra, or such as were used in Corcyra, which are mentioned in a passage of Phrynichus cited by the Scholiast. See also Thucydides, IV. 47.

1452. οὐκ ἀπολιβάξεις (from λιβάς, a drop), will you not drop off?

1453. στρεψοδικοπανουργίαν, justice-twisting rascality.

1455–1466. The Chorus now describe the wondrous things they have seen in flying over the earth. The poet, by ingenious turns, makes it the occasion of sly and amusing satire.—δένδρον. They describe Cleonymus, the Sycophant and Shield-dropper, as a strange tree. “Apte autem arboris mentionem faciunt aves.” Blaydes.—καρδίας ἀποτέρω. There is here a play upon the words, the phrase meaning without heart, i. e. cowardly, or, looking upon Cleonymus as a tree,—and the Scholiast says he is so called, either because he was tall or stupid as a stick,—remote from Cardia.—τοῦ μὲν ἔπος, in spring it shoots forth and plays the informer; alluding to the fact, that in the month Munychion the cases of foreigners were adjudged, as the Scholiast explains it. But Blaydes thinks spring is used here for the time of peace, as winter is applied (v. 1465) metaphorically to war. This tree, the sycophant, puts forth in spring, and in winter sheds the shields; that is, in time of peace Cleonymus busies himself as an informer, and in time of war he runs away from the enemy, and drops his shield in his flight. This is our old acquaintance, the shield-dropper of the Clouds.

1467–1478. These lines are occupied with Orestes, the robber, who is also mentioned before, and whom he classes with the heroes, on account of his name. According to the Scholiast, some of the heroes were supposed to walk by night, and to strike with blindness or apoplexy those whom they met. The haunt of Orestes is described as a place hard by darkness itself in the solitude of lamps. — εἰ γὰρ ἐν ῥύχου. G. § 51. — Πάντα τὰ καλὰ, all the noble parts. The language is double-meaning, applying either to the being struck with apoplexy in the nobler parts, i. e. the head and right side, or to being stripped by Orestes of the most valuable articles of dress.

The scene that follows is one of the most humorous in the play. Prometheus, the natural friend of man, and still more the natural enemy of Zeus, comes hurrying in, to give secret information to Peisthetaios and the birds of the sad condition to which the gods have been reduced, and to advise Peisthetaios to accept no propositions that will be offered by the ambassadors already on their way, unless Zeus shall surrender the sceptre, and give Basileia, or Royalty, in marriage to Peisthetaios. The ambassadors are Poseidon, Heracles, and Triballos, a barbarian god. Heracles is gained over to assent to the demands of the birds by the prospect of a good dinner, which is to be made of certain rebellious birds who have paid the penalty of their treason, and are now cooking in the kitchen. To a Greek, accustomed to this representation of Heracles, — as, for instance, in the Alcestis of Euripides, — no small part of the amusement of the piece would flow from the manner in which the scruples of the doughty hero are overcome. A legal view of his rights of inheritance, as affected by the illegitimacy of his birth, has some weight, but not so much as the smell of the roasting birds.

1479. ἴσως μὴ (elliptical), I fear that Zeus will see me. G. § 46, N. 4.

1483. Πῶνικ' . . . ἡμέρας; What time o' day is it?

1485. Βουλντός, ἡ περαιτέρω; The time expressed by βουλντός, according to its etymology, is that of unyoking the cattle; therefore, after the agricultural work of the day was over; towards evening.

1486. βδελύττομαι. Peisthetairos is out of all patience with Prometheus, whose mind, intent upon his own situation, pays no heed to what the other says:—How I hate you.

1488. Οὕτω μὲν. Blaydes has the following note upon this expression:—"Sch.: ὡς ἐν κωμῳδίᾳ, ὡς καλὸν τι ἀκούσας τὸ οἰμῶζε, ἀποκαλύπτεται φανερὸν αὐτὸν δεικνύς. Festive, quasi dicat: Sic quidem, benigna tua compellatione victus, qui me in malam rem abire jubeas, omnem animo tuo dubitationem eximam et caput meum detegam." But I am inclined to think that Prometheus, still inattentive to what Peisthetairos is saying, refers in these words to his question, Is Zeus clearing the clouds away, or gathering them? or, Is it fair weather or foul? because, if it is foul, I'll uncover. Upon which he throws off his disguise, and stands revealed as Prometheus.

1493. σκιάδιον, parasol. He has come provided with this shelter, under cover of which he may safely unfold his errand.

1494. ὡς ἄν. G. § 44, 1, N. 2. (See v. 1439.)

1499. Πηνίκ' ἄττ'; about what time? ἄττα = τινά.

1504. Θεσμοφορίαις. The ceremonies of the Thesmophoria lasted five days, one of which was spent in fasting. See Smith's Dict. of Gr. and Rom. Antiq.; also Aristophanes, Thesmophorizusae.

1505. βάρβαροι θεοί, the barbarian gods, who, living farther off from men than the Olympian, are also sufferers from the stoppage of sacrificial supplies, and threaten war upon Zeus unless he will throw open the ports, so that the entrails of the victims may be imported.

1507. ἀνωθεν, from above, or beyond.

1509. ἵ' εἰσάγοιτο. G. § 44, 2, N. 2 (b). The Optative depends on the idea implied in the leading sentence, that the gods threatened war.

1512. πατρώος. The Exekestides here mentioned is the same person who has been already satirized as an intrusive citizen. (See note to v. 11.) The constitution of Athens required a scrutiny to be made into the birth of any citizen before he could assume the functions of office. He must be able to show that Apollo was his πατρώος, or patrial deity, and that he was legally under the protection of Zeus Herkeios; that he was an Athenian on both sides, and from the third generation. See Demosth. in Eubul. p. 1315, 15: παιδίον ὄντα με εὐθέως ἦγον εἰς τοὺς φράτορας, εἰς Ἀπόλλωνος πατρώου ἦγον, εἰς τὰλλα ἱερά. So p. 1319, 26, the speaker alludes to the members of his γένος as Ἀπόλλωνος πατρώου καὶ Διὸς ἱρκείου γεννήται. Blaydes, giving the substance of Brunck's note, says: "Execestidem igitur, qui, ut peregrina origine et servili, Apollinem illum Πατρώον Atheniensium vindicare sibi non poterat, ridicule fingit comicus habere, ut barbarum, Πατρώον seu Tutelarem deum aliquem ex barbaris illis, de quibus nunc agitur."

1514. Τριβαλλοί. The Triballi were a Moesian tribe.

1515. τοῦπιτριβείης. There is a play upon the resemblance in sound between ἐπιτριβείης and Τριβαλλοί. Cary gives as an equivalent, "Trouble"; "Tribulation" would be nearer. We might, perhaps, make something like it out of the Choctaws:—"Ah, yes! that's where You be choked came from."

1526. κωλακρέτην. This was the officer who paid out the judicial fees. See Smith's Dict. of Gr. and Rom. Antiq. ; also Hermann's Political Antiquities. — τριώβολα. τριώβολον was the fee or sum paid daily to each dicast.

1531. ἀπανθρακίζομεν, we roast, i. e. cook ; referring to the myth according to which Prometheus bestowed fire upon mortals, having stolen it from the gods.

1534. Τίμων καθαρός, a pure (mere) Timon. Timon the misanthrope is here meant. This personage was a contemporary of Alcibiades, with whom he continued his intimacy after having secluded himself from the rest of the world. He is mentioned in another place by Aristophanes (Lysistrata, 808), and Antiphanes made him the subject of a comedy. The student will remember Shakespeare's Timon of Athens, and the manner in which the great English dramatist has worked out the hints of the ancients respecting this eccentric character.

1535. ὥς ἄν. See v. 1439.

1536. κανηφόροι. The κανηφόροι were high-born Athenian maidens, who carried on their heads baskets containing the materials and implements of sacrifice at the great festivals, such as the Panathenaic, Dionysiac, &c. They were usually attended by persons holding sun-shades over their heads.

1538 – 1549. The Σκιάποδες, or Shade-feet, were a fabulous tribe in Lybia, mentioned by Strabo, and by Ktesias (according to Harpocration), who compares the feet to the web-feet of geese. They are described as walking τετραποδῶν, or on all fours ; or rather on all threes, using one foot, spread out like an umbrella, to protect themselves from the heat of an African sun. In this place the poet designates the philosophers, and especially, as is shown by v. 1540, the disciples of Socrates. The spirit of the passage is like that of the ludicrous scene in the Clouds, where the disciples of the phrontistery are represented in a variety of absurd attitudes and positions. — Ψυχαγωγῆι signifies either to conduct souls, as Hermes guided the spirits of the departed; or to evoke spirits, as was done at Lake Avernus; or to allure the mind, as Socrates was accused of doing to the young men of Athens, corrupting them by his new doctrines. Here it is used ambiguously. Socrates evokes spirits at the lake of the Shade-feet. He is the necromancer of that marvellous tribe. — Πεισανδρος. This is the person mentioned in Thucydides (VIII. 65, seq.) as having been active in subverting the democracy, in the time of the Peloponnesian war. On account of his cowardice, he is represented as coming to Socrates in search of his soul, which has left him during his life. He brings with him for a victim a camel-lamb, either a young camel or a huge sheep. The precise meaning is uncertain. Doubtless there was some sarcastic allusion, readily taken by the audience, but now lost. At any rate, the whole scene is a parody upon the Nekyomanteia, in Odyssey XI. — ἀπῆλθε, went off; i. e. like Odysseus in the scene above referred to, withdrew from the sacrifice that the shades of the dead might not be disturbed. — ἡ νυκτερίς, the bat. See ante, v. 1282. He is said have come up from Hades, on account of his ghostly appearance.

The gods now arrive. Poseidon is giving lessons in manners to the barbarian god, who has never before been in good society.

1552. 'Ἐπ' . . . ἀμπίχες; Do you wear your dress so awkwardly? Literally, to wear it awry, upon the left; to put it, therefore, on the wrong side. The cloak, when properly put on, was so arranged as to leave the right arm at liberty. At least, that was originally the case when the garment was worn in its simplest form. "In nothing," says Hope (Costume of the Ancients, Vol. I. p. 24), "do we see more ingenuity exerted, or more fancy displayed, than in the various modes of making the peplum form grand and contrasted draperies. Indeed, the different degrees in simplicity or of grace observable in the throw of the peplum were regarded as indicating the different degrees of rusticity or of refinement inherent in the disposition of the wearer."

1554. Λαισποδίας. Laispodias was a general, mentioned in Thucydides (VI. 105). He had a defect in the legs, which he concealed by the length of his garments.

1555. δημοκρατία. "Ludit quasi etiam apud deos sit democratia, ut Athenis." Blaydes. Other democracies besides that of the Grecian gods are open to the ridicule of sending incompetent barbarians on foreign embassies.

1559. τί δρῶμεν. G. § 88.

1563. Διπλασίως. Heracles, as Bergler remarks, is made at the outset so fierce for vengeance on the audacious mortal who has intercepted the sacrifices from the gods, whereby they live, in order to heighten the comic effect of his sudden conversion by the appetizing smell of the roasting birds. Peisthetairos, at this moment, is heard giving directions to the cook, as if unaware of the presence of Heracles.

1570. Ἔδοξαν ἀδικεῖν, have been adjudged guilty. A technical expression in Attic law.

1571. ὦ . . . Ἡράκλεις. Peisthetairos pretends to see Heracles now for the first time: Ah! how do you do, Heracles?

1574. Ἐλαιον . . . ληκύβη, There is no oil in the cruet. The servant comes running in with this message from the kitchen.

1577. ὄντες φίλοι, if you were friendly to us. G. § 52, 1. See also § 42, 3, N. 1.

1578, 1579. Ὅμβριον . . . ἀεὶ, You would have rain-water always in your marshes (instead of tanks, "ut ad aves"; the Greeks ordinarily used either spring-water directly from the fountains, or rain-water caught in the tanks), and you would always pass halcyon days. Halcyon days are the supposed seven fair days in winter in which the halcyon was accustomed to make his appearance.

1580. αὐτοκράτορες, plenipotentary.

1583. ἀλλὰ νῦν is elliptical. Supply "though not before," yet now, i. e. if you are at last willing to do what is right.

1587. Ἐπὶ . . . καλῶ, On these conditions, I will invite the ministers to dinner.

1592. ἀρξωσιν, gain the power. The force of the aorist is to express the action as single and momentary, not frequent or continuous. Therefore, here, not rule, but get power. G. § 19, Notes 1 and 2.

1596. ὅταν ὁμνίῃ. G. § 61, 3.

1597. παρελθών, coming up, or passing along. The advantage promised to the gods is, that, if any mortal swear falsely by them, the crow will pounce upon him and pluck out his eyes.

1600. The barbarian god, unable to speak Greek, utters some unintelligible sounds, which Peisthetairos interprets into giving his consent.

1605. Μενετοὶ . . . μισητίαν, saying, "The gods can wait," and shall not repay in full. ἀποδιδῶ = μὴ ἀποδιδῶ. μισητία is luxury, lust, &c.; also abundance, wastefulness; here, perhaps, used adverbially by synecdoche.

1606. Ἀναπράξομεν, we will exact.

1613. οἰμῶζειν δοκεῖ σοι; have you a fancy for a beating? Intimating that, unless he is willing to yield the point, he must expect a beating. "Hercules," says Cary, "trusting that Triballus will not understand, says this for the sake of raising a laugh at the barbarian god." He translates: "Triballus, what think you — of being cursed?"

1614. Φησὶν πάνν, He says that I talk quite right. The subject of λέγειν must be gathered from the context; otherwise it would be the same as that of the finite verb. Again he construes the unintelligible sounds of the barbarian god into an assent to the demand.

1618. παραδίδωμι, I offer to give up. G. § 10, 1, N. 2.

1620. ἐκδοτέον (sc. τῷ Δι). G. § 114, 2. — Οὐ ἐρᾷς, So you don't want a reconciliation; your demands are so extravagant, that there is no hope of coming to terms with you.

1621, 1622. Ὀλίγον γλυκύν, I care but little. Cook, you must make the sauce sweet. Peisthetairos puts on an indifferent look, but counts with certainty upon the effect of the order to the cook upon Heracles.

1623. δαμόνι' ἀνθρώπων, my dearest fellow. The comic force of the phrase is heightened by addressing a familiar form of speech among men to a god.

1624. Ἡμεῖς πολεμήσομεν; There is an allusion to Helen and the war of Troy: Shall we wage a war for one woman?

1626. ἐξαπατῶμενος πάλαι. G. § 10, 1, N. 3; § 73, 2.

1631. οἶόν σε περισοφίζεται, how he is tricking you. Peisthetairos now expounds the Athenian law of inheritance, according to which Heracles, being the son of Zeus by a foreign woman (ὡν γε ξένης), cannot become his heir.

1634. οὐδ' ἀκαρῇ, not a penny.

1638. ἐπίκληρον. "A technical term, signifying a daughter who, having no brother, succeeds as heiress to her father's estate. The Attic law made all the legitimate sons equally heirs to their father's estate, not allowing a man with such sons to dispose of his property by will. The daughters in this case had a right only to their dowry (προίξ), and were called on that account ἐπίπρωκοι. Where there were no sons at the time of the father's death, the whole estate (κλῆρος) descended to the daughters, if there were any,—each of whom was called an ἐπίκληρος. The law, however, looked upon such an ἐπίκληρος rather as a means of transmitting the property to the proper male heir, than as an actual heiress in her own right. The father was allowed, if he left no sons, to dispose of his property by will; but he was obliged to adopt as sons those whom he made his heirs, and the latter assumed with their inheritance all the rights which would have belonged to them if they had been born in the testator's family. If now the testator left a daughter (ἐπίκληρος), he could leave his property to such an adopted heir only on condition of his marrying the daughter, and thus assuming the property. If he left several daughters, he could dispose of each, with her portion of his estate, in the same way. If the father of an ἐπίκληρος died without a will, the nearest male relative had a right to claim her in marriage with her property; and if she was poor, he was obliged by law either to marry her himself or to give her a dowry bearing a certain proportion to his own estate. (See the law relating to poor ἐπίκληροι, quoted in Demosth. in Macart. p. 1067, 27.) The father could dispose of an ἐπίκληρος in marriage before his death, by adopting her husband as his son. If a daughter had married while her brothers were still living, and afterwards by the death of her brothers found herself an ἐπίκληρος at the time of her father's death, the person who could have claimed her in marriage, had she been still single, could even then oblige her to desert her husband and to marry him; and even if he had a wife himself, he could divorce her for that purpose. This illustrates the position which women held in the political system of Athens. The speaker in Demosth. in Eubulid. (p. 1311, 17) describes a pleasant little family scene from his mother's history: 'Ὁ Πρωτόμαχος πένης ἦν· ἐπικλήρου δὲ κληρονομήσας εὐπόρου, τὴν μητέρα βουλευθεὶς ἐκδοῦναι πείθει λαβεῖν αὐτὴν Θούκριτον τὸν πατέρα τὸν ἐμὸν, ὅντα λαυτοῦ γυνάμιον, i. e. Protopachos (the speaker's mother's husband) was a poor man; and on inheriting a rich ἐπικληρος, wishing to dispose of my mother, he induces Thucritos, my father, who was an acquaintance of his, to take her in marriage. (See the law quoted in Demosth. in Macart. p. 1067, 27.) See Meier and Schömann, Attic Process, Book III. 2, Chap. 2, § 2 (pp. 468–470); Hermann, Staatsalterth. §§ 119, 120; Privatalterth. § 63; with the passages quoted in the notes. Peisthetairos here asks Heracles how Athena could be an heiress of Zeus in her own right (as everybody knew her to be), if Zeus had any legitimate children. He seems to imply that the independent position of Athena, as protecting goddess of Athens, entitles her to the rank of ἐπικληρος of Zeus." — Goodwin.

1639. ὄντων . . . γνησίων, if there were legitimate brothers. G. § 52, 1.

1641. ὁ νόμος οὐκ ἐῖ. Heracles asks why Zeus could not bequeath his estate to him. He is reminded of the law which prohibited νόθοι from succeeding to an inheritance. A νόθος at Athens was the child of an Athenian father and a foreign mother: such a child was illegitimate in the eye of the law, that is, he was excluded from the rights of an Athenian citizen. Heracles is jestingly called a νόθος, or illegitimate God, being the son of Zeus and a mortal woman, Alcmena, who stands in the relation of a ξένη to the Gods. A νόθος, not being a citizen, could not be adopted as a son, and therefore could not inherit property by will. (See note to v. 1638.) He must be content with the share of his father's property which the law allowed him; this was called νοθεΐα, and could not exceed 1000 drachmas. See Harpocration, s. v. νοθεΐα; and Hermann, Polit. Antiq. § 118, with the notes.

1643. ἀντίξεται σου . . . χρημάτων, will take precedence of you as an heir to the paternal property. Whereupon he proceeds to quote to Heracles a law of Solon, showing that, even if Athena were not in his way, his uncles, and especially Poseidon, would have the next claim. This law of Solon was renewed in the archonship of Eucleides (403 B. C.), and is quoted by Isaeus, de Hered. Philoct. § 47. The whole law which regulated the succession to property where there were no sons is quoted (at least in substance) in Demosth. in Macart. p. 1067, 1: it contains a clause at the end similar to the one quoted by Peisthetairos.

1646. ἀγχιστέλειαν, rights by nearness of relationship.—εἶναι. G. § 103.

1651. Ἦδη . . . φράτορας; Did your father ever introduce you to your kith and kin? It was required by law that all legitimate sons should be enrolled in the registers of the tribe, deme, and phratría; those of the same φρατρία were called φράτορες. See notes on v. 767 and 1512. See also Hermann's Political Antiquities, §§ 98, 99.

1653. αἰκίαν βλέπων, looking assault, like Shakespeare's speaking daggers.

1659. Ἐν . . . πρᾶγμα, The whole thing now depends on Triballos. He has the casting vote.

1660, 1661. Καλᾶν . . . παραδίδωμι. Triballos tries to give his decision in Greek. The effect of his barbarous pronunciation is conveyed by Cary thus:—

“ De beautiful gran damsel Basilau Me give up to de fool.”

1661. παραδοῦναι λέγει. G. § 23, 2, N. 4. λέγει here means he commands, he tells us; otherwise the sentence would mean, he says that he once gave up. (G. § 23, 2.)

1663. Εἰ . . . χελιδόνες, unless to go as the swallows do; i. e. unless he means to bid her become a bird. Swallows are singled out for birds in general, because the Greeks always compared the speech of barbarians to that of swallows.

1670, 1671. Ἐς . . . γάμους, In good time, then, these fellows (the rebel birds) have been put to death for the nuptials. — τέως, in the mean time.

1672. βούλεσθε ὅπτῳ, do you wish that I should roast, &c. G. § 88.

1673. τενθείαν. The expression is in reference to the tasters, προτενθαί, and means ravenousness.

1674. εὖ ἂν διετίθην, I should be well disposed of, indeed! G. § 49, 2, N. 5.

1676–1687. In this antistrophe the tribe of sycophants (see above) is again satirized. — Φαναῖσι, at Phanae. There was a promontory of that name in Chios; but here it is the pretended residence of the sycophants, or informers, in allusion to the legal action called φάσις. The Κλεψύδρα was the water-clock used to measure time in the courts; also the name of a hidden spring at the Acropolis. The poet makes it a stream in Phanae. — τέμνεται. In allusion to the custom of cutting out the tongue of the victim. Here Attica is the victim of this race of belly-tongued, — the Philippoi and Gorgiai, — who by the arts of speech obtained a subsistence.

1688. ὦ πάντ', &c. A messenger comes in to herald the arrival of Peisthetairos, who is on his way, in regal state accompanied by his bride Basileia, whom he has received from the hand of Zeus. He makes his proclamation in the lofty style of sublime lyric and tragic poetry.

1692. παμφαῆς ἀστὴρ ἰδεῖν. G. § 93, 2. — ἔλαμψε . . . δόμα, shone upon the golden-beaming house.

1695. οὐ . . . λέγειν, unutterable to describe. G. § 93, 2.

1699. πλεκτάνην καπνοῦ, a wreath of smoke.

1702. A parody on Euripides, Troades, 308, seqq., translated by Cary: —

Let your veering flight be wound.”

1704. Μάκαιρα, the happy one, Peisthetairos.

1705. ὦ κάλλους, O the grace, and the beauty!
Genitive of exclamation.

1712. Ἥρα. The Chorus, in enthusiastic strains, compares the marriage of Peisthetairos with that of Zeus and Hera.

1718. ἀμφιθαλῆς Ἔρως, blooming Eros.

1720. παλιπτόνους, drawn back, or tightened.

1721. πάροχος, companion in the chariot; groomsmen; — not to be confounded with πάροχος (parochus), from παρέχω.

1725. Ἄγε. Peisthetairos, assuming the attributes of Zeus, calls upon them now to celebrate the thunder, the lightning, and the blazing bolt.

1735. πάρεδρον, side judge, assessor. One who shares with another the judicial seat.

1741. ὦ μάκαιρα, O blessed one. Addressed to Basileia.

1742, 1743. πτερῶν Δαβούσα, having taken hold of my wings.

1745, seq. These lines, according to the Scholiast, are a parody upon Archilochus, — a strain of victory, with which this gayest and most entertaining of the comedies of Aristophanes ends.

TABLE OF RHYTHMS AND METRES.

[In the following Table, the letter M. stands for Munk's Metres, American edition, translated from the German by Beck and Felton.]

PROLOGUS, vv. 1 - 264.

Verses 1 - 210. Iambic trimeter acatalectic, with comic license. See Munk, pp. 76, 162, 171, seq.

211 - 225. Anapaests.

211 - 215. Anapaestic dimeter acatalectic. M. 100.

216. Anapaestic monometer. M. 99.

217 - 221. Anapaestic dimeter acatalectic.

222. Anapaestic monometer.

223. Anapaestic dimeter acatalectic.

224. Anapaestic monometer.

225. Anap. dimeter catal., paroemiac close. M. 100.

226 - 230. Iambic trimeter acatalectic.

231, 241, 246, 262 - 264, are not intended to be rhythmic, as they are only imitations of the notes of birds.

232, 233. Iambic trimeter acatalectic.

234. Dochmiac dim. M. 11, 225, $\sim \overset{\curvearrowright}{\sim} \overset{\curvearrowright}{\sim} \overset{\curvearrowright}{\sim} \overset{\curvearrowright}{\sim} \overset{\curvearrowright}{\sim} \overset{\curvearrowright}{\sim}$

234. Iambic tripod, anapaestic monometer. M. 78 (3).

236. Dactylic.

237. Trochaic trimeter acatalectic. Longs of the first metre resolved.

238. Dochmiac monometer, $\sim \overset{\curvearrowright}{\sim} \overset{\curvearrowright}{\sim} \sim \overset{\curvearrowright}{\sim}$

239. Trochaic trimeter acatalectic.

240. Choriambic dimeter catalectic. M. 141 (2).

242. Ionici a minore, trimeter acat., $\cup \cup \text{—} \text{—} \cup \cup \text{—} \text{—}$, $\cup \cup \text{—} \text{—}$. M. 151 (3).
243. Dochmiac monometer, $\cup \text{—} \cup \text{—} \text{—}$.
244. Proceleusmatici.
245. Iambic hexameter catalectic. M. 80 (6).
247. Cretic tetrameter. M. 114 (4).
248. " " with the last long of second foot resolved, $\text{—} \cup \text{—}$.
249. Cretic tetram. cat., $\text{—} \cup \text{—}$, $\text{—} \cup \text{—}$, $\text{—} \cup \text{—}$, $\text{—} \cup \text{—}$.
250. Dactylic.
251. Cretic dimeter acatalectic. M. 111 (2).
- 252 – 255. Dactylic tetrameter.
256. This verse is marked by Dindorf as a paroemiac, $\text{—} \text{—} \text{—} \text{—}$, $\cup \cup \text{—} \text{—}$. But the first syllable of raraodelphos is never long. The proper notation, perhaps, is $\text{—} \text{—}$, $\text{—} \cup \cup \cup \cup$, $\text{—} \text{—}$, spondee, paeon primus spondee.
- 257 – 259. Spondaic anapaests.
- 260, 261. Trochaic dimeter.
- 265 – 268. Iambic trimeter.
- 270 – 306. Trochaic tetrameter catalectic. M. 68 (d).
- 307, 308. Iambic dimeter.
- 309 – 324. Trochaic tetrameter catalectic, except 312 and 314, which may be read as dochmiac dimeters.

CHORUS.

- Strophe, 325 – 333 = Antistrophe, 341 – 349.
- 326 – 330. Anapaests, with spondees and proceleusmatici.
- 331 – 333. Cretics, with longs resolved.
- 334 – 340. Trochaic tetrameter catalectic.
- 350 – 384. Trochaic tetrameter catalectic.
- 385 – 397. Trochaic dimeter.
- 398 – 403. Anapaestic.
- 404 – 407. Iambic dimeter.
- 408 – 413. Cretics, with anacrusis in 408 and 411.
- 414 – 425. Iambic systems.

426 - 429. Trochaic, dactylic, $\frown$ -, $\text{—} \text{—} \text{—} \text{—}$.

431 - 433. Iambic.

434 - 450. Iambic trimeter.

CHORUS.

Strophe, 451 - 459 = Antistrophe, 539 - 547.

451. Logaoedic anapaests, $\text{—} \text{—} \text{—} \text{—} \text{—} \text{—} \text{—} \text{—} \text{—} \text{—}$.

452. Iamb. anap. or iambelegus, $\text{—} \text{—} \text{—} \text{—}$, $\text{—} \text{—} \text{—} \text{—} \text{—} \text{—}$.

453. Anapaestic, iambic, penthemim, $\text{—} \text{—} \text{—} \text{—} \text{—}$.

454. Trochaic monometer, dactylic trimeter.

455. Anapaestic.

456. Anapaestic.

457. Anapaestic, iambic, antispast. In the antistrophe, the corresponding verse consists of an anapaestic dimeter and antispast.

458. Anapaestic.

459. Anap., trochaic dipody, $\text{—} \text{—} \text{—} \text{—}$, $\text{—} \text{—}$, $\text{—} \text{—}$.

But the verse is defective. The corresponding line in the strophe is an anapaest and antispast, $\text{—} \text{—} \text{—} \text{—}$, $\text{—} \text{—}$.

460 - 522. Anapaestic tetrameter catalectic. M. 101.

523 - 538. Anapaestic system.

548 - 610. Anapaestic tetrameter catalectic.

611 - 626. Anapaestic system.

627, 628. Anapaestic tetrameter catalectic.

629, 630. Basis, iambic dimeter, — , $\text{—} \text{—} \text{—} \text{—} \text{—} \text{—}$.

THE HAMILTONIAN SYSTEM OF LOGIC AND METAPHYSICS.

A TREATISE ON LOGIC;

Or, The Laws of Pure Thought. Comprising both the Aristotelic and Hamiltonian Analyses of Logical Forms, and some Chapters on Applied Logic. By FRANCIS BOWEN, Alford Professor of Moral Philosophy in Harvard College. Sixth Thousand. 12mo. Cloth. 450 pp. $ 2.00.

Extract from the Preface.

"Among English authors, after Sir William Hamilton, I have been chiefly indebted to Prof. Mansel; and have also derived much help from Thompson's excellent 'Outlines of the Laws of Thought'; but the work would not have been carried on in the same spirit in which my predecessors began it, if I had not ventured respectfully to dissent from some of their doctrines, and even to present some opinions which will very likely be found to have no other merit than that of originality. . . . Throughout the work I have kept constantly in view the wants of learners, much of it having been first suggested while attempting to expound the science in my own class-room."

From James Walker, D. D., LL.D., late President of Harvard University.

"It is, so far as I am able to judge, singularly complete, and yet is brought within reasonable limits. As an English text-book in this department of philosophy I have seen nothing to be compared with it."

From E. O. Haven, LL.D., late President of University of Michigan.

"I have examined the 'Treatise on Logic' by Prof. Francis Bowen with great care, having, indeed, used it as a text-book, and have found it the most thorough and systematic text-book on the subject with which I am acquainted. I think it fully supplies the purpose for which it was written, and in the hands of a good teacher, it furnishes all the aid that he or his class will need."

From Prof. W. D. Wilson, Hobart College, Geneva, N. Y.

"It is, in my opinion, an admirable compend of what is now taught as Logic; presenting with great clearness and skill the rival systems of Aristotle and Hamilton, with a very full and fair exhibit of the thoughts and opinions of all others whose writings are of note on the subject."

THE METAPHYSICS OF SIR WILLIAM HAMILTON.

Collected, Arranged, and Abridged for the Use of Colleges and Private Students. By FRANCIS BOWEN, A. M., Alford Professor of Moral Philosophy in Harvard College. Ninth Thousand. 12mo. Cloth. Price, $ 2.00.

---

The publisher takes pleasure in stating that this work has met with great favor, and has already been introduced as a text-book in all the principal colleges and institutions of learning in the country.

Extract from the Editor's Preface.

"As any course of instruction in the Philosophy of Mind at the present day must be very imperfect which does not comprise a tolerably full view of Hamilton's Metaphysics, I have endeavored, in the present volume, to prepare a text-book which should contain, in his own language, the substance of all that he has written upon the subject. For this purpose, the 'Lectures on Metaphysics' have been taken as the basis of the work; and I have freely abridged them by striking out the repetitions and redundancies in which they abound, and omitting also, in great part, the load of citations and references that they contain, as these are of inferior interest except to a student of the history of philosophy, or as marks of the stupendous erudition of the author."

The Rev. Dr. Walker, late President of Harvard University, in a note to the editor, says of the book: "Having examined it with some care, I cannot refrain from congratulating you on the success of the undertaking. You have given the Metaphysics of Sir William Hamilton in his own words, and yet in a form admirably adapted to the recitation-room, and also to private students."

Prof. J. Torrey, University of Vermont.

"The editor has left scarcely anything to be desired. The work presents in short compass the Philosophy of Sir W. Hamilton, in his own language, more completely and satisfactorily than many students would find it done by the author himself in the whole series of his voluminous and scattered productions."

From the North American Review.

"Mr. Bowen's eminence as a scholar, thinker, and writer in this department, his large experience as a teacher, and his experimental use of the 'Lectures' as a text-book, might have given the assurance, which he has fully verified, that so delicate an editorial task would be thoroughly, faithfully, and successfully performed. We cannot doubt that if Sir William were still living, the volume would have his cordial imprimatur; and the students of our colleges are to be congratulated that the labors of the great master of Metaphysical Science are now rendered much more availing for their benefit, than they were made, perhaps than they could have been made, by his own hand."

FIRST PRINCIPLES OF CHEMICAL PHILOSOPHY.

By JOSIAH P. COOKE, JR., Erving Professor of Chemistry and Mineralogy in Harvard College. New Edition, Revised and Enlarged. 12mo. Cloth, $3.50.

Extract from the Preface.

"The object of the author in this book is to present the philosophy of chemistry in such a form that it can be made, with profit, the subject of college recitations, and furnish the teacher with means of testing the student's faithfulness and study. The author has found, by long experience, that a recitation on mere facts, or descriptions of apparatus and experiments, is, to the great mass of college undergraduates, all but worthless, while the study of the Philosophy of Chemistry may be made highly profitable both for instruction and discipline.

"Part I. of the book contains a statement of the general laws and theories of chemistry, and explanation of its nomenclature and mode of symbolical notation, together with so much of the principles of molecular physics as are constantly applied in chemical investigations. It might be figuratively called a Grammar of the Science.

"Part II. of the book presents the scheme of the chemical elements. It should only be studied in connection with experimental lectures or laboratory work, and will be found chiefly useful for systematizing and reviewing the facts and phenomena observed in the lecture-room or laboratory."

In this new edition, the chapter on the Electrical Relations of the Atoms has been re-written, and the facts presented in the light of a new theory. Important additions have also been made to the chapters on Stoichiometry and Chemical Equivalency. Moreover, throughout the book the text has been altered wherever corrections have been made necessary by the recent progress of the science.

---

From the London Chemical News.

"As far as our recollection goes, we do not think that there exists in any language a book on so difficult a subject as this so carefully, clearly, and lucidly written."

From Prof. Miller, King's College, London.

"It deals with the questions at present under discussion with so much caution, clearness, and breadth of view, that it appears to me to form a very valuable addition to our elementary treatises on chemistry. I have had some experience of the difficulties with which you have had to grapple, and I cannot but congratulate you on your success in your mode of treating them."

A DICTIONARY OF THE SOLUBILITIES OF CHEMICAL SUBSTANCES.

By PROF. FRANK H. STORER. Three Parts, paper, $6.00. Bound in one vol., cloth, $7.50.

From the London Reader.

"The qualities of accuracy, fulness, convenience of reference, and quotation of authorities, will secure the use of this dictionary of solubilities, not only by all investigators, but no analytical student who has mastered his Fresenius can afford to be without it, while manufacturers and pharmacutists will find it the most convenient vade mecum at their command."

From the Journal of the Franklin Institute.

"It is difficult to convey a sufficient opinion of the value of this unpretending work. Practical and experimenting chemists will alone fully appreciate its value, and from its very nature it is scarcely possible to make extracts from it. The solubilities of substances are so intimately connected with their other chemical properties, that this work will be indispensable to every one concerned with chemistry."

---

A CYCLOPÆDIA OF QUANTITATIVE CHEMICAL ANALYSIS.

By PROF. FRANK H. STORER. Part I. Paper, $1.65.

"An examination of this first part of Prof. Storer's Encyclopædia reveals at once the hand of a master, as distinguished from the work of a compiler. The alphabetical order by no means hampers the author's philosophical treatment of subjects. The author's entire familiarity with the whole field of chemical literature has enabled him to render a justice to American researches in analytical chemistry, which has never been awarded by any foreign author."

From the London Chemical News.

"This work will be welcomed by all who take an interest in chemistry, as a step in the right direction. It would be impossible for us to enter into minute details of this work, which indeed, when completed, will be for analytical chemistry what Watt's Dictionary is for chemistry in general. Prof. Storer's work cannot fail to be a great boon to all chemists, and for compiling it we feel greatly indebted to its talented author. We trust that both the author and publisher will find their labors duly appreciated."

THE GREEK HISTORIANS.

SELECTIONS FROM THE GREEK HISTORIANS.

Arranged in the order of events. With Notes by CORNELIUS C. FELTON, President of Harvard University. 12mo. Cloth. $ 2.00. Ninth Edition.

In this work the most famous events of Greek History are given from different authors, chronologically arranged. In this way a complete course of reading in this department can be pursued in one book, and the trouble of changing from the works of one author to those of another in a great degree obviated. The name of the late President Felton gives a sufficient guaranty of the excellence of the selection, and it is enough to say that the plan has been in every respect universally approved. To show the extent of the ground covered, a list of the authors is given, together with the subjects of the extracts respectively taken from them :—

DIODORUS SICULUS.—The Muses; Herakles; Orpheus; the Argonauts; the Seven at Thebes and the Epigoni; Oinomaos, Tantalos, &c.

THUCYDIDES.—Ancient condition of Hellas.

HERODOTUS.—Capture of Miletos and Subjection of the other Ionians; Expedition of Mardonios; Embassy sent by Darius to Greece; Expedition of Datis and Artaphernes; Battle of Marathon; Succession of Xerxes to the Throne; Debate upon the Invasion of Greece; March of the Persians; Preparations of the Greeks; Battle of Thermopylai; Sea-Fights near Artemision; Occupation of Salamis by the Athenians; Battle of Salamis; Battle of Plataia; Battle of Mykale; Siege and Capture of Sestos.

THUCYDIDES.—Origin and Growth of the Athenian Empire, from the Persian to the Peloponnesian War; Congress at Sparta; Speech of Pericles; Attempt upon Plataia; Public Feeling in Greece; Resources of Athens; First Invasion of Attica; Public Funeral of those who fell in the First Summer; Defence of Pericles; His Death and Character; Siege of Plataia; Attack on the Peiraeus; Revolt of Lesbos; Amphipolis; Fifty Years' Treaty; Battle of Mantinea; Debate on the Sicilian Expedition; Final Scenes of the Sicilian Expedition; Effects of the Disasters in Sicily; Oligarchy of the Four Hundred, and its Overthrow; Sea-Fight off Kynos-Sema.

XENOPHON.—Return of Alkibiades; Sea-Fight near Arginousai; Battle of Aigospotamoi; Taking of Athens by Lysandros; The Thirty Tyrants and their Overthrow; Peace of Antalkidas; Battle of Leuktra; Battle of Mantinea.

DIODORUS SICULUS.—Accession of King Philip; Capture of Olynthos; End of the Phocian War; Battle of Chaironeia; Death of Philip.
ARRIAN.—Destruction of Thebes; Battle of Issos; Death of Alexander.

DIODORUS SICULUS.—The Lamian War.

POLYBIUS.—The Achaian League; Battle of Sellasia; Philopoimen Freedom of Hellas proclaimed.

PAUSANIAS.—Capture of Korinthos; Catastrophe.

THE PANEGRICUS OF ISOCRATES.

From the Text of BREMI, with English Notes by C. C. FELTON, LL.D., late Eliot Professor of Greek Literature in Harvard University. Third Edition. Revised by PROF. W. W. GOODWIN. 12mo. pp. 135. Price, $ 1.00.

Extract from the Preface.

"The Panegyricus has been selected for publication, partly because it is an excellent specimen of the best manner of Isocrates, and partly because, by its plan, it presents a review of the history of Athens from the mythical ages down to the period following the treaty of Antalcidas. It is a convenient work to make the text-book for lessons in Greek history, affording a central point around which to assemble the leading events."

From the Commonwealth.

"The Panegyricus of Isocrates, edited by the late President Felton, of Harvard University, has just appeared in a new edition revised by Professor Goodwin, the successor of Mr. Felton in the Greek chair at that University. The oration itself is as familiar to all scholars as the best of the twenty-one extant speeches of Milton's 'old man eloquent.' It is an encomium on Athens, her material, intellectual, and moral greatness, and her claims to the chief place among the Grecian States. Delivered or published at a time when the Spartan supremacy was almost unquestioned, — before the brilliant campaigns of Epaminondas had broken the charm of the Lacedæmonian name, — it is a fine compend of the mythical and the authentic history of the Attic Commonwealth and far superior in truth of matter and graces of style to the Funeral Oration of Lysias, on a kindred theme. In Isocrates, indeed, Grecian rhetoric, as distinguished from oratory, reached its perfection, and few writers in any tongue have excelled him in clear and splendid diction. The nervous and manly style of Demosthenes may be contrasted with it; the one had the elegance of a writer, the other the trenchant force of a popular orator.

"The Panegyricus was the Fourth of July Oration of the Athenians. But this of Isocrates is, by way of eminence, the Panegyricus. It is here printed by John Allyn in the Greek text, with copious English notes by Mr. Felton, who delighted to pour out on his readers the wealth of history and illustrative learning which he possessed. The critical skill, which he was less fond of displaying, is in this edition supplied by the diligence of Professor Goodwin, whose work on Greek Syntax has already made him a high authority in matters of construction and disputed texts.

"The volume before us is neatly printed, and does credit to the publisher as well as to the editors."

From the Bibliotheca Sacra.

"John Allyn, Bromfield Street, Boston, has published a new edition of the Panegyricus of Isocrates. The present edition is edited by Professor Goodwin, of Harvard University, who has added grammatical and other notes, which give increased value to the volume. The Panegyricus is one of the best specimens of Isocrates; and the apparatus furnished in this attractive addition will fully meet the wants of the student."

THE BIRDS OF ARISTOPHANES.

With Notes by C. C. FELTON, LL. D., late Eliot Professor of Greek Literature in Harvard University. Fourth Edition. Revised by PROF. W. W. GOODWIN. 12mo. pp. 235. Price, $ 1.25.

Extract from the Preface.

"The Birds of Aristophanes has always been regarded as one of his most delightful pieces. Like the Clouds, it is comparatively free from the objectionable license of thought and language which deforms several of his plays to such a degree that they cannot be used in schools and colleges. It is true there are some passages in this play also too freely executed; but it has been decided, on mature reflection, to let them stand, so as to offer the drama entire, on the principles which guided my decision in editing the Clouds. The text of this edition is reprinted from the Poetæ Scenici of Dindorf. . . . I have endeavored to explain from other sources a branch of the subject to which little attention has heretofore been given; — I mean the natural history of the birds, which are very entertaining figures among the persons of the play. I suspected that the poet's selection of birds was not made at random, but that, in every instance, they were chosen with a special meaning, and to effect a particular purpose in point of art. In considering the play from this point of view, I have been much indebted to my friend and colleague, Professor Agassiz, of whose profound and comprehensive knowledge of ornithology I have been permitted to avail myself in attempting to determine the species of some of the birds not hitherto identified; and I have come to the conclusion that, in all cases, the character and habits of the birds are exactly and curiously adapted to the parts they perform in the comedy, showing Aristophanes to have been a careful observer of nature as well as a consummate poet. . . . Great care has been taken to illustrate the political allusions, and the application of judicial expressions, in the course of the piece. . . . The satire of the birds is more playful, comprehensive, and genial than that of any other of the poet's comedies. The spirit of parody and burlesque, which is a general trait in the Aristophanic drama, here displays itself most freely and amusingly.

"The dithyrambic poets in general are unsparingly ridiculed; the philosophers and men of science are not allowed to pass untouched; while profligates and impostors of every class and description are here as well as in the 'Clouds,' held up to scorn and contempt."

From Prof. North of Hamilton College.

"President Felton had intellectual gifts and attainments which especially fitted him for the difficult work of editing Aristophanes. His edition of the 'Birds of Aristophanes,' published by John Allyn, is worthy to be more generally introduced among the Greek Studies in the colleges of our country."

THE CLOUDS OF ARISTOPHANES.

With Notes by C. C. FELTON, LL. D., late Eliot Professor of Greek Literature in Harvard University. 12mo. Sixth Edition, revised by PROF. W. W. GOODWIN. pp. 236. Price, $1.25.

Extract from the Preface.

"The greatness of the genius of Aristophanes is not generally appreciated, and the value of his comedies as illustrations of the political antiquities, the life, morals, and manners of Athens, is not fully understood. The truth is, we are indebted to him for information upon the working of the Attic institutions, which, had all his plays been lost, we should have vainly sought for in the works of other authors. No intelligent reader can doubt that Aristophanes was a man of the most profound acquaintance with the political institutions of his age, no reader of poetic fancy can fail to see that he possessed an extraordinary, creative genius. It is impossible to study his works attentively, without feeling that his was one of the master minds of the Attic drama. The brightest flashes of a poetical spirit are constantly breaking out from the midst of the broadest merriment and the sharpest satire. An imagination of endless variety informs those lyrical passages which gem his works, and are among the most precious brilliants of the Greek language. In the drawing of characters his plays exhibit consummate skill. . . . The comedy of the Clouds is, for many reasons, one of the most interesting remains of the theatrical literature of Athens. Though, like every other comedy, its wit turns upon local and temporary relations, it has, what is not common to every other comedy, a moral import of permanent value. It was written at a time of great changes in the national character of the Greeks, and bears marks of its author's determined opposition to the new ethical and philosophical views that were eating into the very heart of the national virtues."

Preface to the Fourth Edition.

"In this new edition of the Clouds the commentary has been revised, corrected, and in some instances enlarged. An Appendix to the Notes has been added, containing references to Professor Goodwin's 'Syntax of Moods and Tenses of the Greek Verb,' a work which has already taken its place among the most valuable aids to the student in acquiring a knowledge of the refinements of the Greek language.

"The Clouds is one of the three or four pieces of Aristophanes which are least tainted with indecency and coarseness. Nothing therefore has been omitted from the text of this edition, as but little danger is apprehended to the morals of young men from a few freaks of an old Athenian's gamesome imagination, to be interpreted only by an assiduous use of the grammar and lexicon. . . . The text of this edition of the Clouds is printed from Dindorf's Poetæ Scenici Græci. In some few passages the readings of Hermann have been preferred. In the preparation of the Notes, the labors of others have been freely used, particularly the elegant commentaries of that elegant Hellenist, Mr. Mitchell, whose editions of the separate comedies, notwithstanding occasional errors in minute points of Greek grammar, are an honor to English scholarship. The excellent edition of the Clouds by Theodor Kock has been consulted, and valuable remarks have occasionally been taken from his Commentary. . . . Some of the materials of the notes and illustrations have been drawn from the editor's personal observations in Greece; others are drawn from the curious analogies of the follies and impostures flourishing in the present day, with those effectively and wittily handled by the poet."

CICERO'S TUSCULAN DISPUTATIONS.

Book First: The Dream of Scipio, and Extracts from the Dialogues on Old Age and Friendship. With English Notes by THOMAS CHASE, A. M. Ninth Edition. pp. 208. Price, $ 1.25.

Extract from the Preface.

"Together with the first book of the Tusculan Disputations, the editor has here presented the Somnium Scipionis, and extracts from the dialogues De Senectute and De Amicitia; thus combining all the passages in the works of Cicero in which the question of the Immortality of the Soul is discussed. Besides the intrinsic interest and value of these treatises as containing the maturest decisions of old philosophy upon a question of universal and nearest concern, they are adorned with a grace of style and happiness of illustration characteristic of their author and worthy of their subject. None of the philosophical works of Cicero holds a higher rank than the Tusculan Disputations for beauty of language and elevation of sentiment; in the Dream of Scipio the lively narrative and poetic coloring enhance the admiration which the loftiness of its views cannot fail to excite; and the dialogues on Old Age and Friendship have always been regarded as treasures of thought and models of composition. . . . The text of the book of the Tusculan Disputations is founded chiefly upon the admirable editions of Moser and Kühner; but those of Orrelli, Nobbe, and Tischer have been compared on every passage, and various old editions consulted in doubtful cases. . . . The Notes are designed to call attention to the most important peculiarities of construction, and to explain the most serious difficulties of syntax and interpretation, without the injustice to the student of robbing him entirely of the pleasure and advantage of surmounting obstacles by his own unaided effort. Particular attention has been given to the illustration of the subjunctive mood; and it is believed that there is not in the book an instance of its use where the principles upon which it depends have not been set forth, in words or by references, in some part of the notes. Every teacher will acknowledge the propriety of devoting especial labor to the elucidation of a form that conveys so many delicate shades of meaning, and upon which so much of the beauty and expressiveness of the Latin language depends. On this point, as on many others, great assistance has been derived from the Latin Grammar of Madvig, whose translator, Mr. Woods (Oxford, 1849), has rendered a service to English scholarship by making an admirable treatise accessible, which bears the marks, on every page, of the discernment and clearness of a master mind. From this work large quotations are made in the notes. The derivation and force of the particles — a point whose elucidation is of hardly less importance than that of the subjunctive for a correct understanding of the language — have also received attention, particularly in the notes on the Somnium Scipionis, Cato Major, and Laelius. The biographical notes are designed rather as guides to the Classical Dictionary than complete descriptions. Frequent reference has been made to Zumpt's Grammar, Beck's Latin Syntax, Andrews and Stoddard's Latin Grammar, and the American Translation of Freund's Lexicon."

HORACE.

The Works of HORACE. With English Notes by the REV. ARTHUR MACLEANE, A. M., Head Master of King Edward's School, Bath.
Revised and Edited by REGINALD H. CHASE, A. M. 12mo.
Cloth. Price, $ 1.50.

This edition of Horace is substantially the same with the Abridgment of the celebrated edition of Macleane in the "Bibliotheca Classica," only such changes having been made in the notes as seemed necessary to adapt them to the use of students in the colleges and schools of the United States. The Arguments of the Odes have been introduced from the larger work; and Dr. Beck's Introduction to the Metres has been appended to the Notes.

The text is the same as in the larger edition. There may be found some little changes in the respect of interpretation, but not such as to cause any embarrassment to those who may happen to consult both editions. Discussions respecting the various readings have been omitted; the information and assistance contained in the Introductions have been for the most part condensed and transferred to the Notes. A few more passages have been translated, and some notes have been added which were not thought necessary in the larger edition. General remarks have been almost entirely omitted, as well as discussions on disputed points and the various opinions of other editions.

The high character of the English edition of Macleane, as well as the skill of the American Editor in his preparation of the work, have rendered the present edition highly acceptable in the various colleges and seminaries where it has come into use.

CICERO PRO CLUENTIO.

M. T. Ciceronis pro A. Cluentio Habito Oratio ad Judices; with English Notes by A. STICKNEY, A. M., late Professor of Latin in Trinity College. 12mo. Cloth. pp. 144. Price, $ 1.00.

Extract from the Preface.

"The present edition of Cicero pro Cluentio is intended as a text-book for college use. The Notes are designed to supply the student only with such information in respect to the facts of the case and the scope of the argument as is necessary to the proper understanding of the Oratio. Grammatical peculiarities are also noticed to a considerable extent, especially in the earlier part of the Oratio.

"The text was already printed before the editor undertook the preparation of the notes. It is simply a reprint of that of Klotz, as it appears in the Teubner edition, published at Leipzig. In a few cases various readings have been given in the notes, where they afforded aid in the explanation of any particular passage. The editions consulted in the preparation of the notes are those of Professor Ramsay, Glasgow, 1858; of Klotz, Leipzig, 1835-39; of Classen, Bonn, 1831; of George Long, London, 1866; of Garatoni, Naples, 1789, and the Commentary of Manutius. The grammars referred to are those of Zumpt, Madvig, and Andrews and Stoddard. The references are, however, almost entirely to Zumpt, as there is at present no generally accessible edition of Madvig. An Introduction and an outline of the Speech are prefixed, with the sections numbered for the purpose of reference in the notes."

The publisher takes pleasure in announcing that all these editions have met with unqualified approval, and begs to call attention to the following testimonials from a few of the Professors who have used or examined the various books of the Series.

From Prof. Goodwin, Harvard College.

"It is rare to find an edition of a classic author so admirably adapted to the wants of students as MR. JEBB'S ELECTRA, and I hope it will have a wide circulation in this country."

From Prof. Wheeler, Cornell University.

"The THUCYDIDES is certainly the best edition for school and college use which I have seen."

From Prof. Foster, Colby University.

"I have read carefully a considerable portion of your edition of the OLYNTHIACS and PHILIPPICS, and have found the notes eminently satisfactory."

From Prof. Jones, University of Michigan.

"I am exceedingly pleased with the appearance of the ACHARNIANS and KNIGHTS of ARISTOPHANES, the new part in your Catena Classicorum. It is truly a beautiful book, and must unquestionably meet with favor at the hands of classical teachers."

From Prof. Dimmock, Williams College.

"I am very glad that you have issued the DE CORONA. I think there was need of an edition with such careful and discriminating notes for class use."

From Prof. McDaniels, Hobart College.

"The notes and scholarship of JEBB'S AJAX are admirable, and I shall certainly use that or the ELECTRA at the earliest opportunity."
